FAUBUS REJECTS IKE'S REQUEST

Hoffa Bandwagon Is Steamrolling

Election Given OK By Warren

MIAMI BEACH (UP) — The Jimmy Hoffa bandwagon appeared today to be turning into a full-fledged steamroller in the race to succeed retiring Union President Dave Beck as top man in the nation's largest union.

Hoffa's bid for the $50,000-a-year labor post seemed to gain momentum by the hour while his opponents apparently were deadlocked in the much-reported plans they were considering formation of a coalition to stop the Teamsters Midwest boss.

Endorsements for Hoffa from several big delegations came Tuesday night shortly after Chief Justice Earl Warren removed the last legal threat to election at the Teamsters convention by refusing a plea to call off the contest. The 44-year-old Detroit labor leader added the votes of the Los Angeles Joint Council, the New England and the eastern conferences as the union's convention went into its third day.

Another Coalition Try

Teamsters Executive Vice-President Einar O. Mohn, previously neutral, threw his support to Hoffa at a meeting of the Los Angeles group.

Meanwhile, Hoffa's opponents said they would make another try at a coalition today. William A Lee, Chicago vice president, won support from the National Bakery Drivers Council late Tuesday night. However, he failed to show the votes necessary to back up his claim that Hoffa has been "stopped."

Lee and the two other candidates — Thomas J. Haggerty of Chicago and Thomas Hickey of New York — met separately Tuesday and were reported ready to try once more to decide on a coalition and which one of the three should remain in the race. Tuesday night's attempts at a coalition apparently did not go off smoothly.

Chief Justice Warren's decision threw the convention into an uproar Tuesday and most of the delegates turned it into a personal ovation for Hoffa. Hoffa gave a "V" for victory salute from the platform at the convention hall as the delegates cheered.

450 Delegates Screened

The ruling from the high court came on a request from 13 rank-and-file Teamsters to halt the election on the grounds it was rigged to guarantee a landslide for the Detroit labor leader.

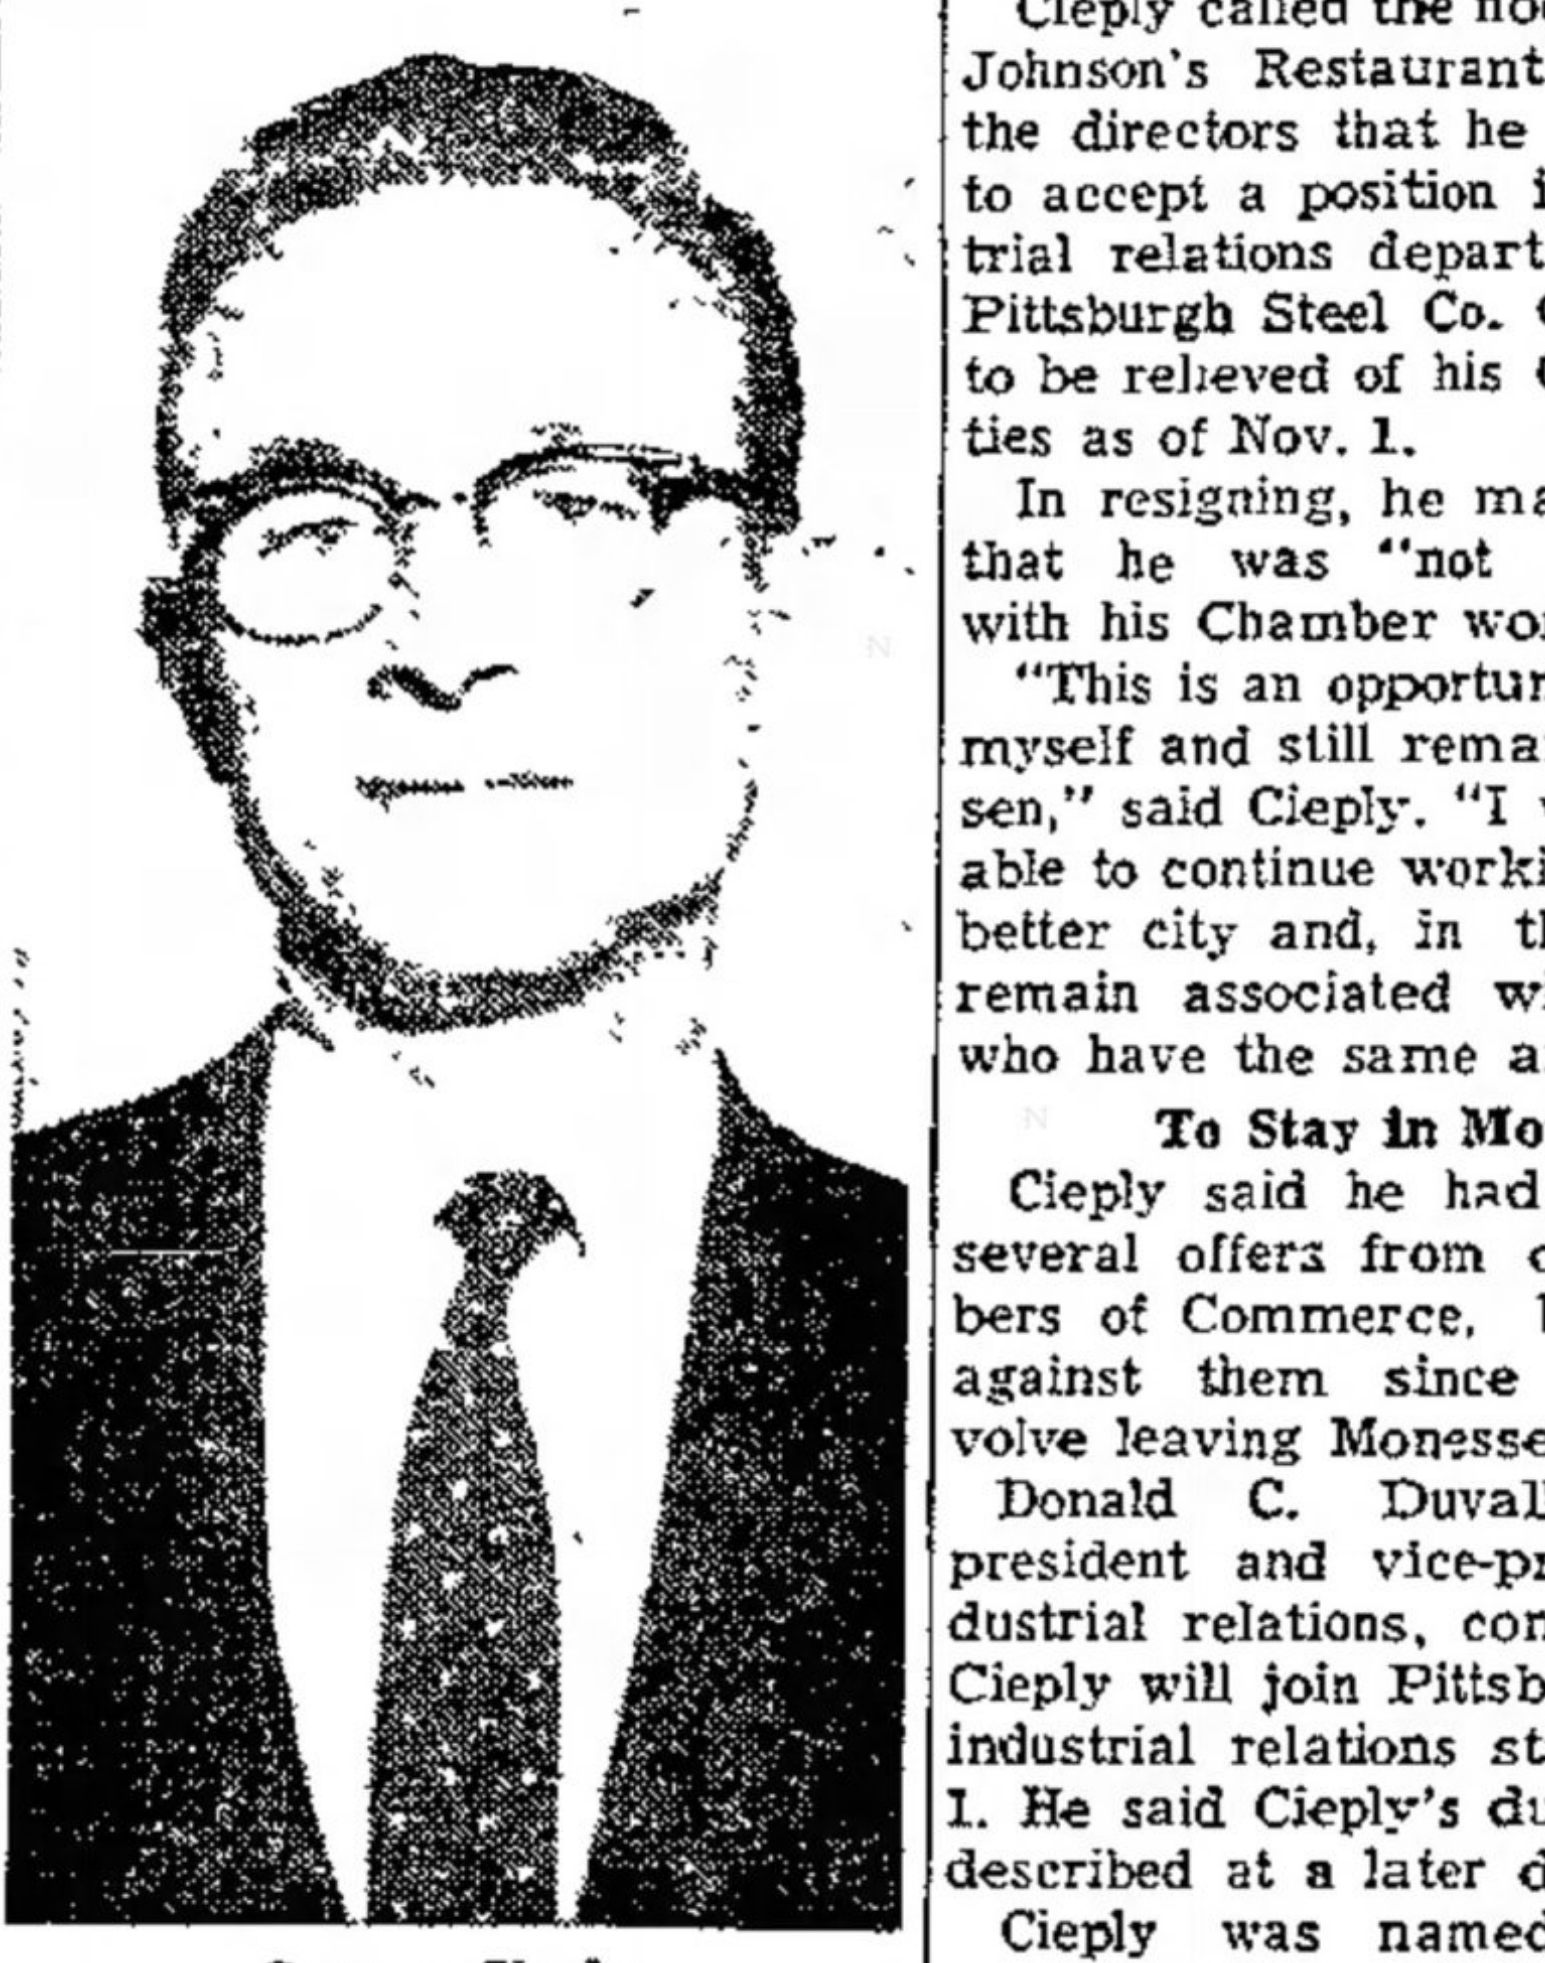
At the same time, the convention Credentials Committee screened about 450 delegates and prepared a report to the floor. The Senate Rackets Committee and Hoffa's rivals protested their seating on the grounds that they were not chosen properly.

The election was scheduled for Thursday. However, continued work on the union's constitution and the possibility of more trouble in the seating of delegates could postpone the election until Friday.

LOOKS CONFIDENT, ALL RIGHT—Appearing supremely confident, James Hoffa gives a wave and a grin from stage of Teamsters convention in Miami Beach, Fla. Behind him smiles the facsimile of Dave Beck, the man he expects to succeed to presidency.

Cieply Resigns Post With Local Chamber

George Cieply, executive manager of the Monessen Chamber of Commerce for the past four years, submitted his resignation today during a special Board of Directors' meeting.



George Cieply

Cieply called the noon session at Johnson's Restaurant to inform the directors that he has decided to accept a position in the industrial relations department of the Pittsburgh Steel Co. Cieply asked to be relieved of his Chamber duties as of Nov. 1.

In resigning, he made it clear that he was "not dissatisfied" with his Chamber work.

"This is an opportunity to better myself and still remain in Monessen," said Cieply. "I will also be able to continue working toward a better city and, in that respect, remain associated with persons who have the same aim."

To Stay in Monessen

Cieply said he had considered several offers from other Chambers of Commerce, but decided against them since it would involve leaving Monessen.

Donald C. Duvall, assistant president and vice-president, industrial relations, confirmed that Cieply will join Pittsburgh Steel's industrial relations staff on Nov. 1. He said Cieply's duties will be described at a later date.

Cieply was named executive manager of the Monessen Chamber on July 23, 1953, succeeding W. P. Bartlett. He was the third person to hold that position since the Chamber's reorganization some years back.

A graduate of Monessen High School with the class of 1942, Cieply holds a bachelor of science degree in business administration and economics from Waynesburg College. He is currently working on a master's degree at Duquesne University.

At Waynesburg, Cieply served as both undergraduate and graduate assistant in the athletic department. He was a salesman for

City Officials to Return Home Today

Monessen City officials were scheduled to return home late this afternoon after attending a four-day convention of the League of Cities of Pennsylvania in Reading.

Representing Monessen were Mayor Hugo J. Parente, Councilmen John Kotch Jr., David Victoria, John Molnar and David Canova and Treasurer John Spielman.

Epidemic Fight on In City

City and school officials took further steps today to curb an epidemic of "head colds and sore throats" which has already closed all Monessen public schools.

All adult evening classes, normally conducted at either the Vocational or Junior High schools, were postponed indefinitely. They will probably be resumed next week.

Chief of Police Michael Kuvinka today told city patrolmen not to lessen their efforts to keep youngsters off the streets. The police are under strict orders to break up gatherings of students who were dismissed from school yesterday.

City health officials are hoping that parents will keep their children indoors.

So far the epidemic - which no one has yet labelled as the Asiatic flu - has confined itself pretty much to district students in the secondary grades.

Parochial Attendance

Even in Monessen, where over 1000 pupils were reported sick yesterday, practically all of them were either in the Junior High or Senior High.

At Rostraver, the same situation exists. About 40 per cent of the Junior High students are ill; 30 per cent of the Senior High enrollment.

However there was little absenteeism in the township elementary schools.

Bellmarette schools reported fairly normal attendance throughout.

Parochial schools in Monessen remained in session today. However they, too, were beginning to feel the epidemic.

At St. Leonard's, 20 per cent of the pupils were absent. Holy Name dismissed its eighth grade yesterday. Officials at both schools, along with those at St. Hyacinth's, said they intended to keep close check on the situation throughout the day.

Normal school attendances were also reported at Donora and Charleroi. However the epidemic has apparently hit Brownsville where absences were reported much higher than usual. There was no talk of closing schools, though.

The epidemic has had no effect on district industry as yet. Steel

Urges Cancellation Of All Activities

Chief of Police. Michael Kuvinka today urged organizations to cancel all activities the remainder of this week as a precautionary method during the current "cold" epidemic in Monessen.

It was learned that all "bingo" games have been called off in the City for the rest of the week.

'DRIVE-IN' MAIL DEPOSITS — Mrs. Michael Buchar, 969 Schoonmaker Ave., Monessen, is taking advantage of a new "drive-in" mail box installed yesterday in front of the city's Post Office. No Parking will be permitted in the area, enabling motorists to drive up and deposit their mail without leaving their autos. A spokesman at the Post Office asked the public to cooperate by observing the "no-parking" regulation.

School Race Trouble In West Virginia

MATOAKA, W. Va. (UP) — Four of nine Negro students at Matoaka High School returned to classes today under the watchful eyes of state and local police seeking to prevent further racial violence.

Four state policemen and three local officers stood guard at the school building in this southern West Virginia coal town as the Negro students arrived. There was no crowd on hand. The other five Negro students were expected to return to classes later in the day.

Six Negro students were slapped and kicked by white fellow students Tuesday during the second day of demonstrations against racial integration. The Negroes were mauled as they attempted to enter the high school.

State Police Escort

State troopers escorted the Negroes into the school building but about 50 white students of a 670 enrollment refused to enter. The Negroes were later sent home to relieve the tension. None of them were injured.

The Matoaka flare-up marked the second demonstration by white students in the state Tuesday. Thirty-five miles west of here 40 students from the Capel Junior High School at Hemphill, marched a mile and a half to try and stir up racial trouble at Welch High School.

The students were intercepted by McDowell County deputies and Welch police. Police said some of the children's parents arrived and either took their children home or escorted them to school.

School officials said the incidents were offshoots of the integration violence in Little Rock, Ark. McDowell County School Superintendent W. R. Cooke said the disturbances "stem from young people reading and hearing of trouble elsewhere."

'Terrible Day' For Negroes at Central High

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UP) — The Negro students in integrated Central High School had "a terrible day" at school Tuesday, according to Mrs. Lucius C. Bates, Arkansas president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Mrs. Bates said that pencils, papers and pebbles were thrown at the children. She said the girls were shown knives and were shoved.

"When they asked a Guardsman about reporting the incidents he just moved away," the Negro woman said. "They (the children) got no protection."

Mrs. Margaret Jackson, vice president of the anti-integration "Mothers League" of Central said "wonderful" when told of Mrs. Bates statement.

"I have no animosity in my heart for colored people but there is resentment in our hearts. . .that never was there before."

No Compromise On Interference; Troops to Stay

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UP) — Gov. Orval E. Faubus refused today to give President Eisenhower additional assurances that he will prevent interference with integration at Central High School.

"I will stand on the statement I made yesterday," Faubus told a United Press reporter as he drove to a news conference at the state capitol.

Eisenhower said Tuesday night that Faubus statement Tuesday was inadequate assurance, and that federal troops would not be withdrawn from Little Rock on the basis of it.

Faubus made clear that he is determined not to alter the language of his declaration, as a group of go-between Southern governors hoped he would do, to break the stalemate between federal and state authorities.

"I have made my public statement and I will stand by it," he said.

"I've given until it has hurt. They want to get me in a spot. They want to blame me. They have contended there was no evidence of disorder and violence, but there must be something that keeps them down here, which proves my contention from the beginning."

The governor intimated that so far as he is concerned, the next move in the situation is up to Eisenhower.

His stand appeared to quash hopes of four moderate Southern governors that Faubus would modify the language of his original statement to conform to what the governors and the White House thought Faubus had agreed to by telephone Tuesday.

Faubus Tuesday issued a declaration saying that if the troopers were withdrawn, he would:

". . .Resume full responsibility for the maintenance of law and order" and assure the White House that "the orders of the federal courts will not be obstructed by me. . ."

The President studied Faubus' statement and about three-and-a-half hours later said it did not provide "the assurance that he (Faubus) intends to use his full powers as governor to prevent the obstruction to the federal court order."

For the first time Tuesday, federalized Guard troops replaced 101st Division troops who integrated Central High with their bayonets last Wednesday and who had maintained daytime guard since.

But Col. Mike Mulhall, a spokesman for Maj. Gen. Edwin Walker, said the troopers "spelled off" the Guardsmen Tuesday night. There was no increase in the strength of the troops, which had been cut down to 50 or fewer.

Heavy Fog Hits Monessen Area

A heavy blanket of fog covered the Monessen district today making driving conditions precarious.

The fog was particularly dense in Rostraver Twp. and caused school buses to be as late as two hours.

Heavy patches also held traffic to a snail's pace on Route 906, from Webster to Fayette City. Traffic also crawled on secondary roads.

The fog began lifting about 8 a. m.

More Hospitals Dropped by UMW Welfare Fund

PITTSBURGH (UP)—The United Mine Workers Health and Welfare Fund is dropping seven more district hospitals and 200 physicians from its "participating" list.

Effective Oct. 15, hospitals to be dropped include: Allegheny General, St. Francis General and South Side, all in Pittsburgh; Ohio Valley, McKees Rocks; Canonsburg General, Latrobe General, and H. C. Frick Memorial, Mt. Pleasant.

Previously, the fund deleted four district hospitals from its list. These were Allegheny Valley, Tarentum; Charleroi-Monessen, Charleroi; Jameson Memorial, New Castle, and McKeesport Hospital.

The fund notified the hospitals it would continue to pay for "bona fide" emergency cases, for patients now under treatment, for maternity cases under fund-approved physicians, and for out-patient services provided by fund-approved physicians.

The notices were accompanied by a memorandum from Dr. Warren F. Draper, UMW executive medical officer in Washington, which pointed to the need for "limiting payments for services to fund beneficiaries to physicians and hospitals whose services are most needed."

More than 200 doctors in Western Pennsylvania, the Northern Panhandle of West Virginia, and Ohio received letters informing them their "participating physician relationship will terminate" Oct. 15.

The UMW fund gave no reason for its move. It has been feuding with hospitals concerning the appointments of fund-approved physicians to their staffs.

Arson Suspected

ERIE, Pa. (UP)—Police today investigated the possibility of arson in a $200,000 fire which wrecked the Marx Toy Co. warehouse Sunday night.

Industrial Employment Decline Is Reported in Valley Area

A decline in industrial employment has been noted in the Monongahela Valley, a survey showed today.

Pittsburgh Steel Co. officials announced that 80 men were furloughed last week, bringing to 200 the number furloughed the past several weeks.

U. S. Steel's American Steel and Wire Division plant at Donora furloughed 60 workers Saturday, making a total of 500 unemployed over a one-year period.

The "small drop" in employment at Pittsburgh Steel is being attributed to seasonal decline in wire mill products and a reduction of the construction department force. A spokesman said there was a heavy buildup of construction workers the past summer and it became necessary to reduce the force once the work was completed.

The spokesman also said the 200 furloughed workers represents "only 4.4 per cent of full employment. The company doesn't consider this out of line."

An official of American Steel and Wire said the temporary layoffs at the Donora plant are due to lack of orders.

"Just as soon as business improves, we'll certainly call the workers back," the official stated.

Robert B. Steiner, manager of the state Bureau of Employment, Charleroi, said there has been a "pretty heavy" volume of claims the past several weeks.

He said the heavy volume was not because of steelworkers alone.

"Our office handles all types of businesses and it would be difficult to single out any individual field as filing the most claims," he remarked.

He added his office usually has a "heavy volume of filings. Much of the unemployment can be attributed, to seasonal layoffs. Some are called back to work before they receive all their claim checks."

Meanwhile, the Bureau of Employment headquarters in Harrisburg announced today that recall of workers to jobs and fewer temporary layoffs among many industries in Pennsylvania reduced unemployment claims by several thousands last week.

The 121,031 workers filing for idle weeks during the week ending Sept. 20 numbered 3,500 less than for the previous week.

A spokesman at the Monessen Page Division, American Chain and Cable Co., Inc., said today that the employment situation there is normal. He could predict no immediate change in the picture.

President's 'Legal Principles' on School Integration Explained

WASHINGTON (UP) — The White House declared today four "legal principles" on school integration and called on the people and governor of Arkansas to fall in step with President Eisenhower on them.

They added up to "obey court orders."

Presidential Press Secretary James C. Hagerty released a text of the principles, which, he said, were read to the Southern governors' committee Tuesday and have "guided the President" in the school integration crisis.

"We sincerely hope that the good people of the state of Arkansas and Little Rock, as well as the governor, will follow the legal principles which have guided the President," Hagerty said.

Eisenhower refused Tuesday night to go through with a tentative agreement for troop withdrawal worked out by a mediating committee of Southern governors Tuesday. He refused because Faubus inserted qualifying words in his pledge to enforce the court's desegregation order if troops were pulled out.

The White House attitude today. Hagerty said, was that the next move is up to Faubus.

He denied that the President was being overly particular about the language used by the governor in his statement. "I don't think it is a matter of semantics at all," he said.

Eisenhower's four principles, in summary:

1. It is the right of the local communities, not the federal administration, to make plans to carry out the Supreme Court's desegregation ruling. However, the courts have made clear that the Department of Justice, when invited by the courts, must participate in court action to enforce school desegregation.

2. It is up to the courts to pass on the reasonableness of the speed with which local authorities decide to carry out school desegregation.

3. "A final order of a federal court giving effect to a desegregation public school plan must be obeyed by state authorities and all citizens as the law of the land . . . final orders of the federal courts carrying out this principle must be observed. It is the duty of the state authorities to give full aid to the enforcement of a desegregation public school plan once it is finally ordered by the court. This obligation is not open to any doubt. "It is also a required responsibility of good citizenship that every person in the

U. S. in Protest Of Death at Haitian Jail

PORT AU PRINCE, Haitia (UP)—Official American charges that a U. S. citizen was beaten to death while in police custody brought relations between Washington and Haiti's ruling military junta to a state of crisis today.

The American, Shibley Talamas, was picked up Saturday night for violating the curfew while out seeking a doctor for his wife. She gave birth the next morning while Talamas was in prison.

A three-man U.S. medical team examined the body of Talamas, and said the chubby, 30-year-old American was beaten to death despite statements by the Haitian military government he had died of a "heart attack."

U.S. Ambassador Gerald Drew filed a vigorous protest with Foreign Minister Col. Louis Roumain and demanded a full explanation of the incident. But Gen. Antonio Kebreau, head of the ruling junta, refused to see him personally.

The United States described the Talamas death as "doubly repugnant" because he was turned over to the custody of Haitian police by a U.S. consulate official who was promised Talamas would not be hurt.

Talamas was first picked up by Haitian troops Saturday night for violating the curfew, effective since Friday night. Talamas explained he was looking for the family doctor because his wife was about to give birth.

Mrs. Talamas, the former Frances Willpula, of Ashtabula, Ohio, gave birth to their first child early the following day.

Asked Protection

After military police searched Talamas' home and found a hunting rifle and a pistol, he appealed to the American Embassy for protection, saying police and army forces were after him.

It was then that the American consulate contacted Haitian officials and obtained their assurances that Talamas would not be harmed if be surrendered.

Talamas went to police headquarters with U.S. Vice Consul J. H. Long and with one of three Talamas brothers who live here.

The next thing American officials heard was that Talamas had died in the police headquarters of a "heart attack" during a "scuffle."

Talamas was educated at Hargrave Military Academy in Virginia and at the University of Texas.

community respect the law and its processes."

4. "Powers of a state governor may not be used to defeat a valid order of a federal court . . . the governors of the respective states have the primary responsibility for maintaining domestic order. However, under a pretext of maintaining order a governor may not interpose military force or permit mob violence to occur so as to prevent the final order of a federal court from being carried out.

"When an obstruction of justice has been interposed or mob violence is permitted to exist so that it is impracticable to enforce the laws by the orindary course of judicial proceedings, the obligation of the President under the Constitution and the laws is inescapable. He is obliged to use whatever means may be required by the particular situation."

The working of point four was clearly aimed at the situation in Little Rock which, as Eisenhower saw it, forced him to take the extreme measure of sending in federal troops and taking the Arkansas National Guard away from Faubus's control.

The White House said it had had no contact today, up to 11 a.m. e.d.t., with any of the four "moderate" Southern governors who arranged the abortive compromise between the President and Faubus Tuesday.

But Gov. Frank Clement of Tennessee, the only one of the four to remain in Washington today, said the governors committee was continuing to work for a solution. "Negotiations have not terminated," he said.

Kept His Wife In the Dark Too

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (UP)—Mrs. Erik Ejgil Nielse always believed her husband was a night watchman.

He left for work every night at 11 o'clock and he always turned over his full salary every Friday.

Leechburg Slayer in Appeal for New Trial

KITTANNING, Pa. (UP)—Judge J. Frank Graff heard arguments Tuesday on a motion by Robert Tallie Davis for a new trial for murder.

Davis, 28, of Pittsburgh, was convicted June 21 of first degree murder in the fatal beating Jan. 30, of Mrs. Emily Foster, 28, of Leechburg, an expectant mother. The jury fixed the penalty at death.

Davis and two other prisoners escaped from Armstrong County's 85-year-old jail Sept. 15 but were captured within two hours.

In his new trial argument, Davis' counsel, attorney Floy Jones, took note of a dissenting opinion by state Supreme Court Justice Michael A. Musmanno in another murder case. He said Musmanno had held that the previous criminal record of a defendant should not be introduced in evidence until a jury has reached a verdict and then only to help it fix the penalty.

"Unfortunately, Justice Musmanno is the only one who said that," Judge Graff commented.

Judge Graff was expected to rule on the motion soon.

After the new trial arguments, Judge Graff sentenced William Crusan, 21, of Armstrong County, to 5 to 10 years for prison breach and 59 to 10 years for robbery, the terms to run consecutively. Crusan was one of the men who escaped with Davis.

The other man, Eugene A. Tentin, of Pittsburgh, previously was resentenced to two terms of 10 to 20 years, to run consecutively.

At Monongahela Memorial Hospital, morning visiting hours have been restricted until further notice as a protection for the patients. A spokesman for Charleroi-Monessen Hospital said no change is anticipated in the visiting hours there.

Doctors' offices in Monessen were overcrowded yesterday and several city drugs stores reported heavy prescrption orders.

Tests of Monessen cases have been forwarded to Philadelphia for analysis, but no report is expected for another week.

The city's public schools were closed yesterday for the remainder of the week.

A least four football games scheduled for this week were cancelled. They were the Homestead-Jefferson, Uniontown - Redstone Twp., Monessen - Hampfield and Shenango-Mercer games.

Health officials cautioned against terming the outbreak the beginning of an Asian flu epidemic. Dr. Arthur G. Baker, Allegheny County health director, said laboratory tests would have to be completed before a diagnosis could be made. He said the tests would take from 10 to 14 days.

Dr. Jonas Salk, University of Pittsburgh virus expert who developed the polio vaccine, pointed out that no other disease erupts as suddenly or spreads as quickly as influenza.

In Allegheny County, only three districts have been hard hit—McKeesport, Mt. Lebanon and Quaker Valley in the Sewickley area. Only two schools have been forced to close, the Divine Providence Academy in Elizabeth and Holy Trinity Elementary School in McKeesport.

Hoxsey Clinic Court Hearing In Recess Today

PITTSBURGH (UP)—A federal court injunction hearing against the Hoxsey Cancer Clinic at Portage, Pa., was in recess today until next Tuesday when the clinic was expected to open its case.

The government has presented numerous witnesses during the eight-day trial. Tuesday, a breakdown of the Cambria County clinic's earnings since 1955 was introduced as evidence. The non-jury trial is being heard by Federal Judge John L. Miller.

The government showed Dr. Newton C. Allen was paid $15,000 when he was fired as medical director of the clinic last December by former state Sen. John J. Haluska, clinic administrator.

Records showed Harry M. Hoxsey, a Texas naturopath, is an actual partner of Haluska and has a 25 per cent interest in the clinic. Government attorneys said the partnership was signed Nov. 29, 1954, three months before the clinic opened.

Haluska has received a total of $63,246 from 1955 through part of this year. Records also showed Dr. J.H. Benko, a dentist and staff member, was paid $30,917; Phillip Stager, treasurer, $82,356, and Samuel Einhorn, a secretary, $13,752.

The government seeks a permanent injunction to restrain the clinic from treating out-of-state patients.

Bloom Charges State Economy Measures 'Phony'

HARRISBURG (UP)—Republican State Chairman George I. Bloom charged today the action of the state Executive Board in fixing new maximums on expense allowances of state employes "is as phony as a three-dollar bill."

Bloom contended the board increased allowances for travel, meals and hotel rooms instead of reducing them.

"Instead of frankly telling the taxpayers that expense allowances are going to be increased and telling why, the administration tried to make it appear that state employes will get less than before."

He said that up to the time of the board action state workers were permitted a seven-cents a mile maximum for the use of their cars. The board made the maximum eight and one-half cents a mile for the first 1,000 miles of monthly travel and four cents per mile for any travel over that level.

"There were also increases in the allowances for meals and hotel rooms over the old maximum amounts," Bloom said. He did not explain but a spokesman said the board raised daily meal allowances from $4.25 to $5 and the hotel room allowance from $5 to $6.

Satellites To Reveal Secrets

(U. S. scientists have revealed for the first time the full extent of the weather mysteries they hope to solve by means of artificial satellites rocketed into the heavens. The following dispatch by U. P. scientific and atomic writer Joseph L. Myler depicts the vast scope of the secrets the satellites may unlock.)

By JOSEPH L. MYLER

WASHINGTON (UP)—Scientists predicted today that earth-scanning satellites of the future will enable man at long last to master the mysteries of weather.

These artificial moons will, on weather patrol high above the planet, spot tornadoes and hurricanes before birth. At the same time they will detect clues to long range climatic changes which in the past have transformed lush regions of the earth into wastelands.

The scientists also said satellites will be able to penetrate atmospheric mysteries of other planets and, presumably, resolve the riddle of whether earth's neighbors can support life of any kind.

Even the first crude artificial moons will provide science with a sort of television program of weather events seen for the first time from above.

Present Predictions

These predictions were made by W. G. Stroud, R. Hanel, W. Nordberg, and R. Stampfl of the Army Signal Engineering Laboratories at Fort Monmouth, N.J. They presented them at a 13-nation conference on rocket and satellite programs of the International Geophysical Year.

Stroud and his associates envisaged satellites circling the earth at 2,000 miles altitude, high above the ocean of air which keeps surface-dwelling man from getting a clear picture of his own atmosphere and what lies beyond it.

Such satellites could scan at any moment in their flights around the earth a region almost as large as North America.

"The generation, growth, and course of hurricanes and typhoons will undoubtedly be observable," the Army scientists said, as will conditions causing thunderstorms and tornadoes.

Less than 5 per cent of the earth's atmosphere is now covered by weather observations. The satellites would bring the percentage to 100.

Tank War Memorial Arrives; To Be Placed on Base Today

An M4 Sherman tank will be set in place today on a 12-inch concrete base at City Park as a memorial to Monessen's war dead.

The 78,000 pound tank was hauled into the city yesterday on a huge trailer-truck under the auspices of the Allison-Lescanac Post 1190, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The tank will be located near the City Park entrance. Tentative plans call for the erection of tablets, listing the names of the city's war dead.

Efforts to place the tank in position yesterday afternoon failed when the winch on the tractor broke. Workmen are scheduled to return today to complete the job.

The big war machine was pulled to within a few feet of the concrete slab.

Inspection Planned

John Hurrianko, commander of the VFW Post, said that an "open house" inspection will be held once the tank is in position. He said a temporary platform will probably be built around the machine, thus affording visitors an opportunity to peek into the inside.

Eventually the tank will be bolted into place and all hatches welded closed.

It took two days to transport the tank from the U. S. Army depot at Chambersburg.

The tank was made available to the VFW as a memorial at a nominal cost to cover "demilitarization."

However the transportation expense boosted the cost of the project to more than $700.

The tank memorial is being financed by VFW members, themselves. There is a possibility that a public subscription will be held later to provide tablets and other items to improve the memorial's appearance.

A police escort preceded the tank through the city yesterday shortly after noon. Except for "demilitarization", the tank stands exactly as it did during World War II.

Civil Defense To Help with Hospital Drill

Civil Defense units in North Charleroi will assist firemen in the simulated evacuation drill at Charleroi - Monessen Hospital next Tuesday.

Joseph Huscroft, North Charleroi fire chief who is in charge of the drill, said that the CD units have offered to cooperate fully.

Huscroft said he has assigned CD the task of deploying ambulances to the schools and the U. S. Army Reserve Center in the lower part of the community where field hospitals will be set up.

No patients in the hospital will be disturbed during the drill, but firemen and CD workers will go through all other phases of the evacuation.

Mack Paul, fire marshal at the Woodville State hospital, has promised to send a rescue truck to take part in the drill.

North Charleroi Burgess John McKay said he has ordered all borough officials to assist in the drill.

Five district fire companies will participate in the evacuation. More than 250 men will use a half-million dollars worth of equipment to carry out the simulated drill.

Yom Kippur to Be Observed This Week End

Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, will be observed with religious services at Monessen Kneseth Israel Synagogue from sunset Friday to sunset Saturday.

The Day of Atonement is traditionally marked by prayer and fasting. It is the climax of a 10-day period of penitence which began with Rosh Hashono on September 26.

Rabbi Theodore Stampfer has announced services will begin Friday at 7 p. m. The opening chant of the evening service is the universally known Kol Nidre prayer.

The high point of the morning service on Saturday will be the Yizko or memorial service in which departed relatives are mentioned. At the time of the setting of the sun on Saturday the closing prayer of the day is known as Ne'eelah.

Dilworth Called 'Strongest' for State Democrats

READING, Pa. (UP) — Philadelphia mayor Richardson Dilworth was described Tuesday as the strongest and "most colorful" Democratic gubernatorial candidate by David L. Lawrence, mayor of Pittsburgh.

Lawrence, a Democratic national committeeman, made his first public statement about possible candidates for governor during the 58th annual convention of the Pennsylvania League of Cities.

The Pittsburgh mayor did not say the Philadelphia mayor should be drafted for the nomination if he declines to run.

The two mayors presided over two important panel discussions which highlighted Tuesday's activities. Lawrence was head of a discussion on the mounting traffic problems confronting Pennsylvania communities and Dilworth directed talks on the question "Will Our Cities Survive'."

To Explain Security Act Here

A field representative has been assigned to visit Monessen every Wednesday to explain changes in the Social Security Act, particularly those affecting widows.

Henry Harper, manager of the Washington Social Security office, said today that he has selected Frank Lyons, a member of his staff, to discuss Social Security problems with district persons at Memorial Civic Center every Wednesday.

Harper pointed out that widows between the ages of 62 and 65 were given preferred treatment under the 1956 changes in the Social Security Act.

Have Certificates

While wives and women workers also can receive their Social Security payments as early as age 62, their filing before reaching 65 will result in a reduction of the benefit payments. Widows, on the other hand, can file at 62 without any reduction in the amount of their payments.

Harper said any widow who is at least 62, and whose husband was insured under Social Security and who has not remarried, should check on her Social Security status at once. A widow who has reached the age of 62 before Nov. 1956 may be able to get all payments back to that month providing she files before Nov. of this year.

To save time, widows are requested to furnish marriage certificates, proof establishing date of birth and the social security account numbers of their husbands.

Files for Divorce

Ralph J. Santmyer of Belle Vernon has filed a divorce complaint in Westmoreland County Court against his wife Bernice, charging indignities. The Santmyers were married in Pricedale April 27, 1934.

Charleroi Chamber to Discuss Sale of Park

Members of the Charleroi Chamber of Commerce will meet tonight to discuss the sale of four acres of land in Recreation Park to the U. S. Army.

The meeting has stirred so much interest that the site has been switched from the small City Building auditorium to the much larger Elks Club. The session is scheduled to begin at 8 p. m.

All interested parties in the proposed — and controversial — sale have been invited to attend the meeting.

The Chamber's Board of Directors has already approved the sale for a price of $24,750. The transaction also has the approval of the park trustees.

Reportedly the Army wants the tract to erect a Reserve Training Center. The proposed two unit building would include a drill hall and several other rooms. When not in use by the military, it would be available for community functions.

David S. Bosson, executive manager of the Chamber, said that a notice of the meeting has been mailed to all members. A proxy form has also been forwarded to every member.

The sale has run into some opposition, with one trustee questioning its legality.

The area desired by the Army is located between the ball field and tennis courts in the park development.

County Constables Warn Against Illegal Solicitors

The Westmoreland County Magistrates and Constables Association announced today that "illegal solicitations" are being made by persons using the names of the Association.

Joseph B. Palangio, secretary of the Association, advised county businessmen to call the police if they are approached by the "illegal solicitors."

"Many business establishments have called to the attention of the Association that solicitors are canvassing the county using the name of the officers and members of the county organization in soliciting funds for the State Association," said Palangio. "We advise all business establishments in the county to contact police in apprehending the illegal solicitors."

Finleyville Man To Head IOOF

He is expected to be named grand master at a meeting of the grand lodge Saturday in Harrisburg. He would succeed W. Martin Heff, 60, who died Monday evening.

A Thrift Week Essay Contest will be conducted in Monessen public and parochial schools beginning Monday, it was announced today by John Abernethy, general chairman of the Monessen Thrift Committee.

The contest is being sponsored by the various savings and loan institutions in Monessen: Mellon Bank, First Federal Savings and Loan Association, Pittsburgh Steel Federal Credit Union and Page Federal Credit Union.

The contest is open to all students from grade seven through high school. Essays for students in the grades 7 to 9 division will be limited to 250 words. Higher grades will be limited to 500 words.

Abernethy said students can obtain material for the contest at the various thrift institutions, Chamber of Commerce, school library and Monessen Public Library.

He said all entries will be judged on originality of thought and expression. Deadline for entries is 5 p.m. Friday, Oct. 18.

Six prominent Monessen citizens will act as judges and select the top essays of each division. The six top winning essays here will then be submitted to the National Thrift Committee for national competition.

Locally, first prize winners in each division will receive $25 savings bonds. Cash prizes will be awarded to second and third prize winners in each division. There will also be prizes for honorable mention.

Besides Abernethy, other members of the committee are Charles Hagerstrand, Mrs. Gloria Mahalko and William Read.

The U. S. and the Arab World

ON THE BASIS of observations made during his current visit to most of the Arab countries, Drew Pearson is reporting that the United States is in serious danger of losing what support it has in these nations.

This conclusion is not original with Mr. Pearson, of course. Responsible officials of our own government have worried aloud and in public about the same thing. And news developments nearly every day are underlining the danger.

But what we can do to maintain the confidence and friendship of the Arab countries while still supporting Israel, which most Arab leaders are determined to destroy, is the question Mr. Pearson is not yet answering.

The Arab mentality is difficult for westerners to fathom. Not since the legendary Lawrence of Arabia has any western figure been able to get close to it.

The Eisenhower administration has made an honest and intelligent effort to recover some of the trust which the United States lost among the Arabs as a result of the Truman administration's playing domestic politics with the American Zionists. And for its pains the present administration has drawn the abuse of some American Jews who have their religion mixed up with the fortunes of a foreign state.

But even the Eisenhower policy has not been enough to redress the balance and bring the Arabs confidently to the side of the west.

The basic reason, we're inclined to think, is that the Arabs have not yet decided what they want. Or they do not yet all want the same things.

Until these ancient and psychologically complex people decide whether they want real self-government and true national independence and are willing to work and sacrifice to achieve them, it is going to be hard for their friends to help them.

We know that they can never fully accept Communism. Allah specifically forbids it.

But whether they want some form of democracy is something they will have to decide. And until they decide we doubt that anyone can draft a diplomatic policy towards them which will have a chance of winning their trust and friendship.

Dodging the Issues

PUBLICITY releases from the headquarters of the Democratic party in Westmoreland County have been saying that the theme which the party's candidates in the county election will stress is that the Democratic party is the "party of the people."

Now comes a speech by District Attorney L. Alexander Sculco, one of three Democratic candidates for common pleas judge. And sure enough, Mr. Sculco talks about inflation under the Eisenhower administration, labor legislation and social security.

The political philosophers who run the Democratic organization in Westmoreland County don't need any advice from us as to what their party line should be in this campaign. On past performance they would seem to be qualified to play the game their own way.

We have to wonder, however, whether a good many voters won't want to hear something more than party slogans from some of these candidates.

Take Mr. Sculco for example. As district attorney for eight years, he hasn't been able to do a thing about inflation. And as a judge he couldn't do any more.

Aren't the voters entitled to hear from Mr. Sculco some account of his performance as district attorney? He has been charged with serious neglect of duty in permitting rackets and vice to operate on an organized basis. His reelection four years ago was marked by the crudest kind of cheating at the polls.

Instead of talking about inflation, shouldn't Mr. Sculco be talking about law enforcement and the administration of justice in the courts of Westmoreland County?

If Mr. Sculco and his fellow candidates don't get down to the real business before the voters at this election, aren't we entitled to suspect that they aren't very proud of their records?

Drew Pearson's current tour of the Middle East is producing some of the best background we have had recently for understanding the problems of that area. And it should make hearing him at the Monessen Chamber of Commerce dinner on Oct. 15 a "must" for many people in the Valley.

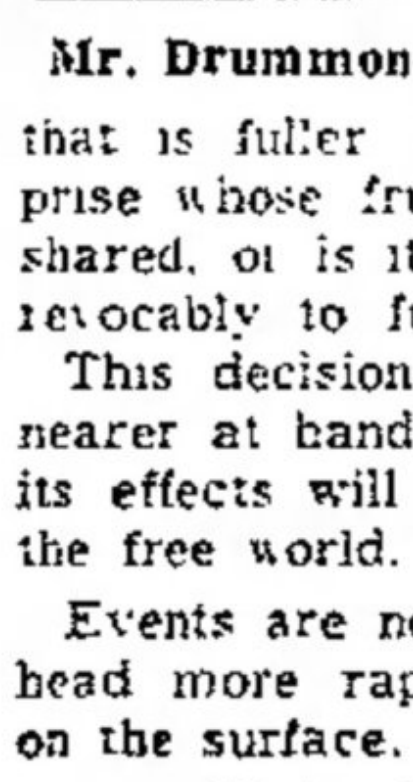
From London—

Will Britain Choose More Socialism?

By ROSCOE DRUMMOND

LONDON — The biggest news in Britain is not yet in the headlines. But it is in the making and will be in the headlines before long.



Mr. Drummond

The news to which I refer is the fact that the British people cannot now long escape — indeed must soon make — an extremely fateful decision.

The decision is this:

Is Great Britain going to embrace popular capitalism, that is fuller competitive enterprise whose fruits are widely shared, or is it going to turn irrevocably to full-scale socialism?

This decision is getting visibly nearer at hand. Whichever it is, its effects will be felt throughout the free world.

Events are now bringing it to a head more rapidly than appears on the surface.

Choice Inevitable

The largest meaning of the Macmillan government's decision to increase the bank rate to 7 per cent is that it sets in motion a chain of events which before they have gone very far will require the country to make a decisive choice between a freer, more competitive economy or a managed economy with the government going farther down the road toward mass-scale nationalism for which there will be no turning.

The British Chancellor of the Exchequer, Peter Thorneycroft, fully supported by Prime Minister Macmillan, knows full well where he is headed.

The lifting of the bank rate to 7 per cent is the beginning, not the end, of Mr. Thorneycroft's policy.

The end purpose is to apply by a whole series of actions a decisive brake on inflation. The use of credit control and restriction of public investment is only the start.

To achieve this purpose the government will have to show that it is determined — and my information is that it is determined — to hold the line on wages unflinchingly.

Curb on Wage Hikes

New wage contracts will soon have to be negotiated with the unions by management and by the government, first in the nationalized railways. Mr. Thorneycroft has made it clear to management that it will have the support of the government in resisting all wage increases which are not directly related to increased productivity.

This is a risky policy decision. There is no foretelling the ultimate consequences. It could bring on a series of strikes which would hurt the British economy and endanger the pound. It could bring the government down with a crash in the next election.

But Mr. Thornycroft and his colleagues are convinced that they are embarked on the right course and on the necessary course. They are prepared to be rejected politically or rewarded politically for what they are now doing. They figure that at the very least it is better to be thrown out of office for doing something than for doing nothing.

Mr. Thorneycroft is personally convinced that there is at least an even chance or better that the nation will react favorably. Union leadership may reject political tactics and go along with a government and private-industry wage policy which is anti-inflationary. If strikes do ensue, the majority of the British public may side with the government, which would mean that the strikes would be short-lived and the heretofore declining political stock of the Macmillan government would begin to rise.

More Socialism?

But behind the credit control and hold-the-line wage policy is the larger question: Is Britain going to move to a freer, more competitive economy — in a word toward the kind of social-minded capitalism which prevails in the United States and Germany — or is it going to commit itself further to socialism to the point of no return?

The decision cannot long be delayed because the fiscal and economic policies of the government are headed toward a freer, more competitive economy. Either these policies are going to win the support of the country or the swing will almost certainly be sharply the other way.

The [illegible] party is by no means [illegible] a policy of large-[illegible] tion of industry [illegible] lections get near-[illegible] ng list" of indus-[illegible] pokesman want to [illegible] ing of the govern-[illegible] ger and larger

Mr. Thorneycroft, who guided the anti-monopoly bill through Parliament and who has strongly supported Britain's association with European free trading area, knows where he is going. He is going to find out before long whether the British economy can long remain half-free and half-socialized — whether Britain is going to be a "welfare state" or an "opportunity state."

Merry-Go-Round—

U. S. Is Losing Arab World

By DREW PEARSON

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A trip through the Arab states leaves you with the depressed feeling that what happened to the United States in China is now happening in the Near East. The Arab world, once the great friend of America, is slipping through clumsy diplomatic fingers.

Mr. Pearson

There are three reasons for this:

1. We have staked our policies on the kings of the Arab world, at a time when the restless masses are ready to relegate royalty to the limbo of forgotten things. Actually we haven't much else to rely on. If King Feisal of Iraq, King Hussein of Jordan and King Saud of Saudi Arabia go, there is no one else in the Arab world except president Chammon of Lebanon who will stand up for us. The old order is going, yet we have no friends in the new.

2. We have zig-zagged with such haphazard policies that even our best friends never know quite where we are. We urged the British to get out of Suez before they had any guarantees from Nasser. We offered Nasser the Aswan Dam, then pulled it away from him, later rescued him from the British and France at Suez. We blasted Syria, then modified our stand toward Syria. Loy Henderson, Dulles's special envoy, refused to see the foreign minister of Syria but now Dulles says he'll be glad to see the same foreign minister.

3. After undermining the British position in the Near East and thereby causing a power vacuum, we have done nothing to fill that vacuum.

Will Turkey Attack?

Distances are short in the Near East. The whole area isn't much bigger than New York State and New England. Damascus, the capital of Syria, is about as far from Beirut, capital of Lebanon, as Trenton, N. J., is from New York. Lebanon, a semi-Christian country surrounded by Moslems, isn't much bigger than Delaware. Israel is the same size as Massachusetts. Amman, capital of Jordan, is much closer to Tel Aviv, Israel, than New York is to Boston. Beersheba in southern Israel is 30 minutes by air from Cairo — if planes were flying, which they aren't.

In this close juxtaposition of suspicious peoples, what your neighbor does a few miles away, sends political tremors through the streets of every capital in the Near East.

Up in Damascus, 60 miles from Beirut, the Syrians have had the jitters over a Turkish attack. This was the chief backstage reason for the sudden, unexpected visit of King Saud and the big Arab show of solidarity last week.

The State Department has also had a certain amount of jitters over Turkey, which is one reason John Foster Dulles reversed State Department policy and began to unbend a bit toward Syria. The State Department fears that any attack on Syria by Turkey would bring Russian intervention and touch off World War III.

Real fact is that Turkish Ambassador Esin's speech in the UN warning of Communist arms in Syria had much more behind it than appeared on the surface. The Turks face exactly what Israel faced last summer when a tremendous flow of Russian arms was piling up on the Egyptian-Israeli border. Fearful of what would happen once Russian "volunteers" used those arms or trained Egyptians to use them, Israel attacked.

Russia's Huge Navy

Now Czech arms are piling up in Syria on the Turkish border. To the north in the Black Sea, Russia has a naval force three times the size of the U. S. 6th Fleet — and the 6th Fleet is a powerful striking force of 75 warships. Moscow has also been beaming radio broadcasts to the Kurdian tribes inside Turkey aimed at inciting them against the Turkish government.

All this explains why Turkey is worried and has been considering doing what Israel did — striking before it is too late.

To this end Turkey has been talking to her Baghdad pact ally, Iraq, which is also anti-Communist, also fears Russian penetration of Syria.

It was this explosive situation which caused King Saud to make his special trip to Damascus, and simultaneously send his brother, Crown Prince Faisal, to call on President Eisenhower.

Actually Saud is just as much worried about Russian penetration of Syria as the United States. But his hatred of Israel is greater than his fear of Russia. And any disunity among the Arab states, he figures, would only play into the hands of Israel.

So he went to Damascus where at a state dinner under the flags of all the Arab states, he and Premier Ali Jawdat of Iraq made it clear there was complete Arab unity.

"I deplore every aggression on Syria and on any other Arab country from whatever source it comes," said King Saud meaningfully, with one eye on Turkey and the other on Israel.

Meanwhile his crown prince and prime minister advised Eisenhower to kiss and make up with Syria. He told the President that Secretary Dulles's warning about Communism in Syria was driving Syria deeper into Russian arms. Syria, he said, is anxious to patch things up with the United States and be a friend of the West.

Just how this is possible with some $150,000,000 worth of Czech arms pouring into Syria and with harbors, railroads, highways and irrigation projects built with Russian capital, the Crown Prince of Saudi Arabia did not explain

CHICAGO — Dr. Edward H. Rynearson of the Mayo Foundation, in saying that employes who slip out for coffee breaks aren't loafing, but are seeking a bodily need:

"Their nervous tension may cause them to develop a low blood sugar. They need refreshments to restore their sugar to normal and regain strength."

WASHINGTON — State Department spokesman Lincoln White, in challenging Red China to end its propaganda and make applications to get its newsmen into the United States:

It seems to me that if Radio Peiping or the Chinese government is sincere, they will get off the dime and make some applications instead of mouthing a lot of words."

MIAMI BEACH — Teamsters President Dave Beck, in changing his mind and saying he would recognize a court injunction against union elections:

"We will not act contrary to the wishes of the court."

Behind The News—

Red China Receiving Many Foreign Visitors

By CHARLES M. McCANN

Communist China is playing host to an unprecedented number of official and semi-official visitors from both sides of the Iron Curtain.

Delegations from eight foreign countries are in China now. Delegations from three others have just left.

Mr. McCann

The reason for the visits is: 1. Red Chinese leaders Mao Tse-tung and Chou En-lai are assuming steadily increasing importance in the Communist World. 2. Non-Communist countries are becoming increasingly interested in trade possibilites.

Hungarian puppet Premier Janos Kadar is the most important foreign visitor at the moment.

Next in importance is former Indonesian Vice President Mohammed Hatta, who has again become the No. 2 leader in his 'neutralist" country.

There are two visiting delegations from Syria, where pro-Russian leaders are now in control of the government. One delegation consists of journalists, the other of students.

West Delegations Leave

There is a big parliamentary delegation from Soviet Russia and there are delegations from Russian satellites Czechoslovakia and East Germany, semi-independent Communist Poland and independent Communist Yugoslavia.

The delegations which have left were from West Germany, France and 'neutralist" India.

The West German delegation, which enjoyed semi-official status, signed an agreement for an exchange of $54,700,000 worth of goods each way.

This represents only a tiny fraction of West Germany's total annual exports of 5 billion dollars. But it is an indication of a trend.

A similarly semi-official delegation of French economists also has left after long discussions in the possibility of trade.

It was announced on Saturday that the Red Chinese government will send an official delegation to Great Britain in mid-October to talk trade.

Relaxes Trade Restrictions

Britain has led the Western world in seeking increased trade with Communist China, and has drastically relaxed its restrictions on types of goods which may be sent there.

Britain also led the way among Allied countries in recognizing Red China. The recognition was accorded by a Labor government, which was then in office, on Jan. 6, 1950. That was immediately after the Communists swept the Nationalists off the mainland.

The Chinese did not respond. They snubbed the diplomatic envoy whom the Laborites sent to Peiping. The respective embassies are still headed by charges d'affaires, not ambassadors. But this situation is likely to end soon.

Communist China is having its troubles. Its economy is suffering from growing pains. Even more than in other Communist countries, intellectuals and members of the Communist Party are beginning to question the acts of their leaders and Communist philosophy itself.

But Red China's prestige is beginning to rival that of Russia's in most of the Communist world. In the Far East, Chinese prestige is higher.

The Lighter Side—

Science Editor Writes Book About Music

By DOC QUIGG

NEW YORK (UP)—Delos Smith is a 6-foot-2, 210-pound reporter-by-trade who wears an inquisitive look, from years of questing for real facts behind murders, fires, explosions, and such remarkable human excursions as the Ku Klux Klan, the Lindbergh kidnaping, and the Salk vaccine discovery.

He also has a slight stoop to his big frame from years of bending over desks by day, wrangling with words, and bending his expert ear at night toward record players, concert stages, symphonies, and opera.

And he also is science editor of an institution that shall not here be nameless—the United Press.

Bathed In Music

This three-way career (he also is U.P. music critic and editor) does not strike him as strange because his overall approach to it is as a reporter, a calling into which he flung himself at age 18 in the early 1920's over his family's violent objections. They were sure he was going to be a Methodist preacher. He thought otherwise.

His family, however, had one victory. They bathed him in music, as he says, "practically from birth." And, as he says in the preface of his new book, "Music In Your Life," published today by Harper:

"Although it is a private matter, I don't mind saying that if music were taken from my life, the loss would be grievous and, perhaps, insupportable. Privately, I believe the 46 geniuses described in this book are among the greatest human beings who ever existed.

Mozart A Nincompoop

"Indeed, it is my private belief that Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart was the greatest of all human beings. It pains me exquisitely to have to report to you, in my professional capacity, that he was something of a nincompoop."

His approach to this book is strictly reportorial. It presents, in one volume, in a series of intimate portraits, the lives of the 46 greatest musical composers across five centuries, from Palestrina to Gershwin. Smith's interest in them is as human beings—in getting a close, hard look at their lives and personalities. His thesis is that each remained a human being despite his genius.

You Do or Don't

Smith is a colorful writer, and he is also a no-nonsense man. He will tell you, in conversation: "I think there is more blank - blank nonsense about music, more people scared away from it by poseurs, than in any field. People say, 'I can't understand music.' It's not music they don't understand; it's neurotic attitudes about music.

"My rule about music is very simple. If I like it, it's music; if I don't like it, it isn't music. That's true—it isn't music to me. I would urge that attitude on anybody. If they don't like Bach, for heaven's sake say so. I understand music, but I'm a newspaper man."

Dr. A. John Goetz, superintendent of Monessen's schools said today that "alleged short-comings" of the local school system should be adjudicated locally, and charged that to "publicize" them was a "smear and a cruel disservice" to the community. Dr. Goetz was replying to a statement issued by representatives of two nationally known teachers organizations yesterday that a basis exists for charges of "unprofessional and unethical" practices in the local school system.

Silent screen actress Olive Borden died yesterday at a mission five miles from the glittering Hollywood of which she was once a part. She found overnight fame in the film "The Eternal Woman."

The Monessen High School football stadium will be rededicated as Memorial Stadium on its tenth anniversary Friday night in a ceremony between the halves of the Monessen-Brownsville football game. Game Cancelled Unless Points Needed

Ordinarily, so much space as has been taken up here lately wouldn't be devoted to front-page news like the closing of the schools here but when the closing makes such inroads into the sports program then it becomes sports news . . . The complete sports card was wiped out here for this week with the Hempfield game to be cancelled unless the Spartans need points in the AA championship race should they remain undefeated . . . Otherwise the game is "of the books" . . . Rostraver was also affected in having the game with Glassport switched from Friday until Saturday night . . . Not only were the players affected but most of the coaches also contacted the cold, flu, respiratory inflammation or whatever it is that has taken so many off the active list.

This writer's condolences to Armand Mori and the Mori family on the death of Armand's father this week . . . The faithful Faculty Manager of Athletics here had been filling his role at the high school then dashing to the hospital until Athletic Director Everett Pancook took over the duties here so Armand could be with his dad until the end . . . Don Soberdash, former Dunbar halfback, whom Bellmar fans remember well for his running against the 'Canes a few seasons back, put on quite a show for the Georgia U. grid team in a loss to Texas in the opening game last week . . . Soberdash transferred to Georgia from Maryland U. . . . Incidentally, Bellmar has not won two A games as stated here Monday, one win was over Class B Centerville.

Valdiserri's Luck Omen for Irish?

Roger Valdiserri, son of North Belle Vernon bakery owners Mr. and Mrs. Silla (Sack) Valdiserri, who serves as Notre Dame coach Terry Brennan's secretary, experienced quite a thrill recently when he scored a hole-in-one at the Long Beach (Ind.) Country Club. Roger used an eight-iron on the 100-yard hole, the ball hitting the flag pin, sliding down into the cup . . . He was playing with ex-Irish assistant coach Bob McBride and friend Harry Foster . . . The South Bend newspaper played up the story as a good omen for Notre Dame after last year's run of bad luck . . . Roger is referred to in the story as Brennan's man Friday (plus six other days of the week).

Uniontown High School's crack grid team has been riddled temporarily with 24 out of 33 players down with a "respiratory infection" . . . Raider fans reported here Friday night that some of the players were not feeling well . . . Alex Krill Scores Twic e — No Credit

In last week's Rostraver-Marion Junior High football game, careless spotting resulted in a lad being overlooked for his efforts in scoring the two Marion touchdowns in a 28-13 game . . . The report turned in to the newspapers had two others scoring the TDs . . . Since this is the first season of football for Alex Krill, of Lynnwood Ave., Belle Vernon, and he started off by tallying twice it was more important than ever that his efforts be recognized hence this bit here . . . Be careful in reporting games, especially with names . . . Don't look now but the Communists, according to latest statistics, are completely outplaying us in the field of international sports, 15-1 . . . Iron Curtain countries have entertained 323 foreign teams to just 20 for the USA in a year.

Hempfield Tilt Off; 'Cold' Hits Niccolai

It's a good thing the Hempfield Joint-Monessen game is definitely off for this week for had it been scheduled nobody would have shown up to play the game including the coaches.

Latest to be felled by the "colds" which riddled the football squad and attendance at the local high school, were Armand Niccolai, head Greyhound grid coach and assistant Andy Kuzemka.

At the same time it was announced from over Hempfield way that Spartan coach Bill Abraham was also on the sick list.

Despite the fact that the game has been called off and only one coach Assistant Harry McCurdy and a few gridders available for practice sessions several of the "healthy" Greyhounds have asked permission to drill on their own.

'News' Cheers Coach

This bit of news cheered Niccolai, who went home from school yesterday morning suffering from a sore throat, sore back and a headache.

Doctors refuse to tab the current "sickness" as the Asiatic flu although stating there are flu-like symptoms but for the time being it'll be called a "bad cold."

In a telephone conversation from his sick bed last night "Nick" said "we'll probably try to practice a little on Thursday (tomorrow) but that's only if this thing (the cold) let's up and quits knocking out my players and coaches."

'Cold Wave' Hits Rostraver Sports

Rostraver Township sports have also been curtailed somewhat by the "cold" epidemic striking students and teachers in the area.

Athletic Director James Weir announced today that the Rostraver-Glassport game originally carded for Friday night would be played Saturday night instead at the Rostraver High Stadium. He also announced that Friday's junior high tilt had been postponed to a later date.

Marion and Vernon report no difficulty so far and apparently the Vernon-Fallowfield game will be played as scheduled tomorrow afternoon as well as the Marion- Perry clash. Rostraver was to play South Huntingdon.

Son Helps Buff Win 'Coach of Week' Honor

By FRANK LITSKY

NEW YORK (UP) — He was worried about starting his inexperienced son at quarterback but the youngster won the game.

He couldn't persuade his wife to watch the game or even listen on the radio "because she was afraid the boy would do something wrong!"

He was carried off the field on the shoulders of his players, a rare occasion at a college where football victories are mighty scarce.

He is also (Buff) Donelli of Columbia, the United Press coach of the week after his first game at Columbia. The always undermanned Lions, with Donelli's son, Dick running, passing, kicking and defending superbly in a 59-minute iron-man stint, upset Brown, 23-20.

It was noteworthy enough for a two-touchdown underdog and it was poetic justice because 20-year old Dick, the Columbia mascot a dozen years ago, faced so much pressure.

"Dick sure surprised me," the 50-year-old Buff admitted. "Don't forget, he was a sophomore last year and played only eight minutes, all at halfback. The ironic part is that he enrolled at Columbia because I was coaching at Boston University at the time and we both felt he would be under less pressure playing for another coach."

Pressure On Son

"But this business of having a close relative playing for me is nothing new. When I coached at Duquesne, my best player was my brother, Allan. There was talk of favoritism. Now, there's more pressure on Dick than on me but Dick should work out all right."

Buff, who got his nickname "because Buffalo Bill was the Davy Crockett of my younger days," left the comparative serenity of Boston U. because of "more money, the prestige of an Ivy League job and the challenge."

He replaced Lou Little, a sort of living legend who guided Columbia teams for 27 years and was happy to win a couple of games a season against teams with much more manpower. Though Columbia sought Donelli for the job, he, like Little, doesn't even have a contract but works under an "annual appointment."

Earthquakes are more common in Italy and Japan than anywhere else in the world.

Bafile Rolls 518 St. Cajetan Score

Joe Bafile showed a 518 for the best three-game effort in the St. Cajetan Bowling League yesterday with Joe Lukatich showing a 190 for the single mark game. Bafile, John Catnazard, Phil Bongiornio and Frank DeLuca all had 183 single-game marks. Others scoring high were Ralph Greco, Frank Venneri, Frank Castiglia, Joe Radic and John DeLuca.

Standings — Notre Dame 7-2, St. Johns 7-2, Niagara 6-3, Villa Nova 6-3, Fordham 4-5, Loyola 4-5, St. Vincent 3-6, St. Francis 3-6, Georgetown 3-6 and Duquesne 2-7.

Pearl Woodward's 504 New MLCL Record

Pearl Woodward posed a new three-game high record for the Monessen Ladies City League with a 504 in yesterday's action. She also had the single game high of 193.

Wellesley, Seton Hill, Cedar Crest, Mt. Mercy and Rosemont copped victories in yesterday's matches.

Other top pin-topplers were Helen Zdilla, Adeline Szabo, Betty Malinchak, Betty Gallas, Marie Columbus, Sara Pascotti, Jean Sandis, Rosemary Betza, Mary Opalinski and Mary Malezya.

Parker Signs HB Billy Wells

PITTSBURGH (UP)— Coach Buddy Parker must cut one player from his Pittsburgh Steeler squad today to make room for halfback Billy Wells, acquired Tuesday in a trade with the Washington Redskins.

The fleet Wells, a three-year veteran who led the Redskins in ground gaining in 1954, will report to the Steelers to prepare for Saturday night's game with the Cleveland Browns at Forbes Field.

Dean Derby, rookie halfback from the University of Washington, took part in his first workout with the Steelers Monday. Parker put his charges through spirited drills in preparation for Pittsburgh's 15th meeting with the Browns. Derby was picked up from the Los Angeles Rams.

A sellout crowd of 36,000 was expected to be on hand for the Cleveland game.

Bendetts and Popettes posted Croation Ladies Bowling League victories yesterday over the Vilettes and Paulettes.

Valley's Newest Team

Tomorrow afternoon at Aliquippa High School's athletic field, the first football team in the history of the valley's newest Junior High School, Carroll Township, will take the field against the Beaver Valley team.

The Aliquippa game is one of five on a gruelling Junior WPIAL schedule which includes, (in order) after tomorrow's game, Brownsville, Glassport, Turtle Creek and Scott Township.

Since they have no field of their own as yet, Carroll will play its two home games, with Brownsville and Glassport, at Monongahela and Donora high school fields, respectively.

Nicknamed Lancers

The Lancers, as the Townshippers have elected to nickname their athletic teams, face this rugged schedule as a result of scheduling difficulties encountered through the existence of local conferences, completed schedules, and the ensuing limited availability of open dates. School and athletic officials are hopeful that an opening will occur in one of the local conferences and membership extended them in one of these organizations prior to the 1958 season.

Dean L. Simpson, the head mentor of the Carroll team has been busily preparing the Lancers for their opener for the past three weeks.

The inexperienced team has shown well during the practice sessions and appear ready for their first encounter. Simpson and assistant coach Roy Muckle have been faced with the terrific problem of moulding green material into a formidable grid machine in preparation for the high calibred opposition which shall provide a real test for their charges.

Many of the boys have impressed in scrimmage with Dale Diaz, a former Monongahela Little and PONY baseball star, a hard running, speedy back, turning in some outstanding performances. Bob Davis, a pile-driving fullback, has also given the coaches something to smile about as he consistently grinds out yardage. Tom McGuffie, Skip Anderson, and Ken Mellor have been running well and possess the potential to develop into good backs.

The offensive and defensive line play of John Caserta, Bob Popovich, Rich Falkevitz, and Barry Borodaty has been commendable with Jim Lusk, Ronald Linaburg, Joe Malena, Jerry Marraccini, and Ray Janney improving with each practice.

On Faculty Since Opening

Simpson and Muckle have been employed on the faculty at the new Junior High School since it officially opened on September 24, 1956. Both Simpson and Muckle coached the Carroll volleyball team last season and posted a fine record in interscholastic competition as well as tournament play.

Simpson is a graduate of Dormont High School where he compiled an excellent record while participating in football, wrestling, gymnastics and track. He received his Bachelor of Science degree from Slippery Rock State Teachers College and participated in football and the extensive intra-mural program offered at that institution. He was captain of the swimming team, a member of the Varsity Club, and Sigma Tau Delta Fraternity while enrolled in under graduate work at the college.

Simpson spent two years in the United States Army and served a portion of this time with the Army Counter Intelligence Corps in Germany.

In addition to his teaching and coaching duties, Simpson is Athletic Director at Carroll Junior High School. Simpson is currently attending the University of Pittsburgh pursuing a course of study that will eventually lead to the Master's Degree. He resides at 3159 Annapolis Avenue, Dormont, Penna.

Roy T. Muckle, assistant coach of the Lancers, is a resident of North Charleroi and a graduate of Charleroi High School, where he played football and baseball with the Cougars.

Muckle attended college at California State Teachers and received his Bachelor of Science Degree in 1953. His service experience was with the United States Army in the Corps of Engineers. Roy has been very active in working with youth organizations, has managed PONY League teams in the Charleroi area, and has participated as a player in the fast valley softball league for several seasons.

Prior to joining the faculty at Carroll Junior High School last year, Mr. Muckle was principal of the North Charleroi grade school for several terms.

DOCTORING YOUR GOLF

By CARY MIDDLECOFF

Four Backswing 'Dont's'

There are four "don'ts" to keep in mind as you learn the correct backswing.

First, don't pick up the club at the start of the backswing; the arc of the swing will get out of whack right away.

Second, don't let the clubhead start back first. This will cause you to break your wrists too early. Halfway through your backswing, your wrists should start to break or cock, your left arm should be straight.

Third, avoid any swaying.

Fourth, see that you don't start the club back with the hands first. The left arm will bend early in the swing and your balance will be destroyed.

Basilio Tabbed 'Boxer of Month'

MILWAUKEE (UP) — The National Boxing Asso. today named new middleweight champion Carmen Basilio its September 'boxer of the month" and declared Basilio's welterweight title vacant.

Fred Saddy, chairman of the NBA's rating committee, said it was automatic for a champion moving to a higher division to surrender his old title.

Saddy said the NBA is "anxious to stimulate a speedy" elimination tournament to name Basilio's welterweight successor, and named in rated order Tony De Marco, Isaac Logart, Vince Martinez, Gil Turner and possibly Virgil Akins as likely participants.

Yanks, Braves Square Off

Ford vs. Spahn in '57 Opener

By LEO H. PETERSEN

NEW YORK, (UP) — Whitey Ford of the New York Yankees and Warren Spahn of the Milwaukee Braves, two of baseball's craftiest southpaws, went out after the opening, and what usually turns out to be the key game, in the World Series today.

Although Ford, hampered with arm trouble periodically during the season, won only 11 games, the Yankees were 13-10 favorites to win the first game and 17-10 choices to take the series.

Spahn, a 21-game winner and the only pitcher on the Braves staff with previous series experience, was manager Fred Haney's automatic choice. Most baseball experts were agreed that as the 36-year-old southpaw goes, so will go Milwaukee.

They figured that the under-dog Braves to beat the Yankees, who are used to World Series triumphs, would have to get two, if not three, triumphs out of Spahn.

"But we have other pitchers who helped us win the pennant," Haney insisted, adding a warning "not to sell any of them short."

There appeared no doubt, however, that he was going along with the experts' opinion. With two days out for travel as the teams shift from New York to Milwaukee and then back here—if sixth and seventh games are necessary—Spahn could start the fourth and seventh games, as well as the first.

Casey Starts Ace

Casey Stengel of the Yankees, like his rival manager, also was shooting with his ace.

"He's got his guy and I got mine," said Stengel. "His man's a wonderful man and been a 20-game winner ever since he got in the league. My man's a swell pitcher, too, though, and that's all there is to say."

Ford, who will be 29 three weeks hence, has won four games while losing two, in series competition.

He has been a major factor in five of the eight pennants which Stengel has won in nine years as the manager of the Yankees. Ford has the best overall won and lost record of any pitcher in the major leagues today—91 victories against only 33 defeats.

Getting off in front is the No. 1 objective of any manager and no less than 32 teams in the 53-year World Series history have gone on to the world championship after taking the opening game.

Stengel was confident he would wind up with his seventh series winner, especially after learning that two of his slugging stars, Mickey Mantle and Bill Skowron, were ready to start.

Mantle Says He's Ready

Mantle, reporting on the bad left leg which kept him on the bench after the Yankees clinched the American League pennant, said, "I'll be ready" after the Yankees final tune-up drill Teusday.

Skowron, the hard hitting first baseman who specializes in pulverizing left handed pitching, said the bad back which has sidelined him for nearly three weeks was "a lot better."

Haney, working his Braves out during the same hours which the games at Yankee Stadium will be played, said he was sure his outfielders wouldn't have any trouble with the late afternoon shadows.

"After all, I've played there and managed there," he pointed out. "It isn't much different than most parks."

AL Has Series Edge

NEW YORK (UP) — Of the 53 previous World Series, the American League has won 34, while the National League entries have been victorious 19 times. The New York Yankees, who are favored to beat the Milwaukee Braves in the 1957 classic, have won 17 previous Series and lost five.

Maurice Mathieu

Mathieu Stars For Miami U. Frosh Eleven

CORAL GABLES, Fla. Oct. 2 — They're singing the praises of a former Monessen High School athlete, who starred for the University of Miami freshmen even in defeat as the frosh dropped a 9-6 decision to Mexico Polytechnic in Mexico City Saturday.

The player in question or in the limelight is Maurice Mathieu, All-Mon Valley Conference first team choice and high scorer last year while playing for Monessen High School.

Mathieu, one of the fastest men on the squad, made a beautiful 34 yard punt return to the Mexico Poli Tech 25 to start Miami on its touchdown drive.

The Hurricane frosh went into the game under tremendous handicaps. In the first place, the plane which was to take them to Mexico City on the day of the game was hours late taking off and they arrived in the Mecico capital less than an hour before the game was scheduled to start. Mexico Poli Tech is a four-year school and Miami's frosh played its varsity team. The Mexicans had tied California Poly 21-21 the week before — and California is also a four year school.

The game however did what the Miami coaches wanted — showed them more about their athletes than the daily scrimmages with the varsity could have shown all fall.

Mathieu emerged as one of the bright prospects-and since the varsity is short-handed in the backfield this year, he should step right up next year.

A sidelight on Mathieu was revealed after the game. It seems that the Pennsylvania lad got a bad case of homesickness only a week ago and was actually at the airport before Coach Bob Campbell caught up with him and persuaded him to stay. "Boy, am I glad about that," said Campbell. "This kid is a real comer. We need him here."

Hays said Tuesday that graduates of the present PONY League, which is limited to 13-year-old boys, will enter a new league, to be administered by the present Pony League headquarters here.

Browns Favored Over Steelers but There's That 'Parker Jinx'

By EARL WRIGHT

Can Buddy Parker maintain his jinx over Paul Brown's Cleveland Browns?

That's one of the interesting questions National Football League fans can mull over before Parker's Steelers play host to the Brownies Saturday night at Pittsburgh.

In six seasons as coach of the Detroit Lions, Parker compiled a record of 10 victories, one tie and one loss in championship, regular season and exhibition competition against the Browns. No other coach has been so successful against Brown's club.

The Browns are favored by 3 points against the Steelers. The Steelers are picked to win.

The Giants are six-point choices to whip the Eagles at Philadelphia and the Chicago Bears are 5½ point favorites to defeat the Colts at Baltimore in the other Saturday night games. The Giants and Bears are picked to win.

In Sunday's action, the Cardinals are seven-point choices to defeat the Washington Redskins at Chicago, the Packers are six-point choices against the Lions at Green Bay and the Los Angeles Rams are favored over the Forty-Niners by the same margin for their game at San Francisco. The Cardinals, Lions and Forty-Niners are picked to win.

Correction

In an advertisement for Sanford Motors, Inc., in yesterday's paper, the number of miles on the 1956 Chevrolet was given incorrectly. The mileage should have read 7,800.

Vernon Class of 1950 Holds Reunion Here on Saturday

Covers were laid for 55 members and guests when the 1950 graduating class of Vernon High School gathered for a reunion seven years after their graduation.

The affair was in the form of a 6 o'clock dinner at the Park Casino last Saturday night. Table appointments were in blue and yellow with fall flowers and fall leaves arranged as the centerpiece. Each cover was marked with a miniature diploma tied with the class colors. The guest table was appointed with candles held in crystal holders.

Each guest was presented with flowers, the men with a yellow boutonniere and the women with corsages of blue carnations. A miniature box of candy was given each as a favor.

James McLaughlin acted as toastmaster for the program after dinner. George E. Fee, who served as supervising principal of schools at the time of the graduation of this class, was introduced. In a humorous way he recalled many of the class members and told some of the things he remembered about them.

David McCully, who was high school principal in 1950 and who also served as class sponsor, gave a brief talk as did Ross Boston, who was class sponsor.

Brief Summary

Clyde Neil read an article "Do You Remember", which he interspersed with some original remarks.

Each class member gave a brief summary of the years since graduation. Laura Peroney Palenekosky read the ambition and favorite song of each member as they appeared in the 1950 year book.

Mr. McCully showed moving pictures taken of the group from ninth grade through graduation.

Need Rules Governing Atomic Energy Use

PHILADELPHIA, (UP)—Public Utility Commissioner Joseph Sharfsin said today the PUC must soon provide "some form of regulation" of atomic energy use to generate commercial electric power.

In an address prepared for delivery today before the Pennsylvania Electric Association's 50th annual meeting here, Sharfsin noted that the Duquesne Light Co.'s atomic generating plant at Shippingport, Beaver County, is expected to go into service this year and predicted that atomic power will bring new problems before the commission.

"There will be problems related to acquisition of property and financing of new projects where the commission must consider and determine the present and probable future capital needs of a company," he said. "I can envision many developments that will call for more specific and varied provisions for protection of both the public and the utility."

Atomic power plants are now under construction in 12 states and scheduled to be put into operation by 1962. In addition to the Duquesne Light Co. plant in Pennsylvania, two other atomic energy plants in California will be opened this year.

"Ultimately," Sharfsin said, "the state Health, Insurance, Forests and Waters, Mines and other departments will be obliged to establish new standards to meet problems growing out of the peaceful uses of atomic power."

He voiced confidence that use of atomic fuel will guarantee "continuous and abundant" power, particularly useful in areas where the cost of transporting conventional fuels—such as coal, gas and oil—is great.

"It is axiomatic that, in undertaking new techniques, the early stages are costly and uneconomic, but you have proven in your industry that in the end the result has been to produce and render service on a cheaper basis," he said.

Oil Imports Are Reduced

WASHINGTON (UP)—The government reported progress today in its bid to reduce oil imports by voluntary means.

Capt. M. V. Carson Jr., head of the import reduction program, said the 20 companies involved imported an average of 966.800 barrels of crude oil a day in August compared with a recommended 755,700 barrels daily for the year ending June 30, 1958.

But he said the importers estimated their average daily imports between Sept. 1, 1957, and Jan. 31, 1958, would be 809.400 barrels. That would be only 53,700 barrels over the proposed quota compared with the 211,000 excess barrels in August.

Crippled Craft Safe

BRISTOL, Tenn. (UP)—A crippled Capital Airlines C46 loaded with freight made a safe emergency landing at the Tri-Cities Airport Tuesday. Pilot N. M. Chapman radioed that one of the engines burst into flames over Paynesville, Va., on a flight from Dover, Del., to Nashville. The flames were doused by built-in extinguishers before the plane landed.

Germans Crack Down

BONN, Germany (UP) — Children under six years of age were barred from movie houses in West Germany today under a new law affecting minors. The law also bars children under 12 years from movies after 8 p.m., and bars all minors from variety and cabaret shows. Youngsters under 16 are not permitted to attend any public dances. Those from 16 to 21 may go only until midnight. Alcoholic beverages can be served only to persons aged 16 and over. The new law also prohibits children under 16 from smoking in public.

State to Give To 55 Counties

HARRISBURG (UP)—The state Welfare Department announced today it will complete reimbursement payments to 55 counties "within 10 days" to help cover the cost of local programs for dependent, neglected and delinquent children.

The department said 40 counties received final payments last week and 15 others would be paid shortly. The reimbursements came from a two million dollar appropriation made by the 1956 Legislature to cover the 1955-57 biennium.

All counties except these 12 received state funds: Allegheny, Bucks, Butler, Centre, Forest, Fulton, Jefferson, Juniata, Lawrence Pike, Venango and Wyoming.

Gunmen Holdup in Uniontown

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind. (UP) Authorities today sought to link a gunman, who with a companion shot and killed two state troopers, with the unsolved murders of five persons in California and New Mexico.

Victor Wayne Whitley, 26, Granger, Tex., was captured Tuesday near North Vernon, Ind., after a night-long search by a force of about 250 police officers. His arrest climaxed one of Indiana's greatest manhunts since the days of Dillinger.

State police sent Whitely's picture and fingerprints to western points as a suspect in the murder of two El Segundo, Calif., policemen last July, and the slaying of two young women and a man in New Mexico two days later.

The tall, blond bandit, held in jail here under a heavy guard, admitted he and his slain accomplice staged a cross-country crime spree before their wild two-state flight that began Monday afternoon in Michigan.

In their wake the killers left one state patrolman dead and one wounded seriously in Michigan, and another state policeman dead and two police officers wounded, one critically, in Indiana.

Also killed was Whitley's partner in crime, Ralph Walker Taylor, 36, of near St. Alban's, W. Va.

Taylor was wounded fatally by a volley of police bullets when the two bandits crashed a road block south of North Vernon shortly before midnight Tuesday night.

Whitley shoved the body of his dead accomplice from the car and drove away, but abandoned his bullet-riddled getaway car a short time later to take cover in a nearby woodland. Taylor was a convicted rapist and parole violator.

A small army of police ringed the wooded area during the night keeping him "pinned down," and then flushed Whitley from the woods shortly after daylight. Whitley, his hands up and unarmed, surrendered meekly.

Whitley blamed the slayings of the troopers in Michigan and Indiana on Taylor.

"I guess Ralph was just no good," the gunman said, wryly.

Whitley also admitted that he and Taylor committed at least 20 armed robberies in 13 states since last June, police said.

Uniontown Holdup

Authorities in Michigan, meanwhile, indicated they would be willing to have Whitley tried for murder in Indiana where he would face death in the electric chair. The maximum penalty in Michigan is life imprisonment.

Whitley, his icy calm unruffled by intensive police questioning, signed three statements admitting his part in the murders and four months of "pulling armed robberies."

He said they held up loan companies, liquor stores and super markets at New Orleans and Shreveport, La.; Atlanta, Ga.; Covington, Hopkinsville and Louisville, Ky.; Wilmington, Del.; Frederick, Md.; Uniontown, Pa.; Chattanooga, Tenn.; Greenfield, S.C.; Morgantown, W. Va.; Trinidad, Cape Girardeau and Kansas City, Mo., El Dorado, Ark.; Terre Haute, Ind., and Omaha, Neb.

San Marino in Beginning of Small Civil War

SAN MARINO (UP)—Communists and anti-Communist rivals in this freckle-sized republic drew battle lines today for a miniature civil war.

A group of Christian Democrats who proclaimed a new anti-Communist government holed up in an unfinished iron foundry just 50 yards from the Italian border. They had 200 men who slept on straw on the floor during the night, their rifles of 1891 vintage at their side.

The Communists, with 250 volunteers, were entrenched in the government palace, six miles away.

In the middle was Police Chief Ettore Sozzi and his force of 50 men armed with World War I carbines. Sozzi apparently was struggling to remain neutral.

The entire population — 14,000 persons—of this ancient, 38-square mile republic was on edge.

The opening shot was fired Tuesday night after four Christian Democratic leaders announced in a proclamation written in longhand they were now the legal government of San Marino.

A bullet allegedly fired by a member of the Communists' peoples militia plunked into a piece of wood just above the head of metal worker Giulio Massima as he was entering the Christian Democratic compound.

It prompted a Christian Democratic council of war that did not end until after midnight.

The congress agenda embraces talks, discussions and workshops on elementary and secondary education.

No Verdict; Trial Is Dismissed

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—One of the most sensational courtroom dramas in movieland history—the Confidential magazine criminal libel trial—was listed as a flop today after the jury failed to reach a verdict and dismissed in the 13th day of deliberation.

The trial came to a sudden end Tuesday when the much-confused jurors revealed they were "hopelessly deadlocked" 7-5 for conviction. Superior Judge Herbert V. Walker declared a mistrial and set Oct. 10 for discussion of a possible new trial.

Whether a new trial will take place remains a big question mark. The prosecution had vowed to "fight to the end" for a conviction but the defense maintained a new trial "will be a shameful waste of the taxpayers' money."

The jury's dismissal climaxed more than six weeks of dragging the alleged private activities of top movie stars through the limelight and nearly two weeks of actual deliberation. The time spent deliberating tied a Los Angeles county record of 13 days for a criminal trial.

The quick ending came as a surprise even to Judge Walker. He had summoned jurors back to his courtroom to ask them how they stood. Foreman Fred L. McCulley, a retired railroad man, informed the judge of the deadlock and advised him there was little hope that the panel could ever agree on a verdict.

Individual defendants Fred and Marjorie Meade, the husband-wife operators of an alleged Hollywood listening post for Confidential, were in court when the jury was "thanked" and dismissed.

Red Army Troops in Germany Are Ready

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG

HEIDELBERG, Germany (UP)—The Soviet Union's 22 Red Army divisions in East Germany are at their "most dangerous" stage of the year for the West, U.S. Army authorities said today.

They said the Russian troops, equipped with atomic weapons and other latest type arms, are at peak combat readiness and will be until a new training cycle starts in December.

"From our viewpoint, the period of September and October is the most dangerous," a spokesman at the U.S. Army's European Headquarters here said.

"That is the end of the Soviet annual training cycle and prior to the release of dischargees and receipt of recruits. Their forces during these two months are at their highest state of combat readiness of the year."

While the United States is carrying out a sweeping face-lifting of its own 200,000-plus army in Europe for future atomic warfare, the Russians have been making similar preparations, officers at this key U.S. headquarters disclosed.

Gen. Henry I. Hoedes, commander-in-chief of the U.S. Army in Europe, told United Press: "There has been no decrease in Soviet forces in East Germany, despite their propaganda claims to have cut them. They have improved their weapons, brought in tactical atomic arms and new tanks and are constantly improving them."

U.S. Army authorities here estimate that Soviet forces in East Germany total some 400,000 men, organized into six armies and supported by a tactical air force.

A spokesman said the Soviet division in East Germany are maintained on approximately 70 per cent wartime strength and can take to the field effectively on short order.

Authorities here said Soviet Soldiers are conscripted each October and serve three years in the army. The arrival of recruits in East Germany, they said, takes place in November and December, when the annual training cycle begins.

This replacement system enables at least two-thirds of a unit to consist of veterans at all times. The U.S. Army proportion in Germany is about one-half or less.

U.S. authorities estimate the strength of the Red Army in Russia itself at 175 divisions, or roughly three million men.

Economic Unrest, Political Crisis Sweeps France

PARIS (UP)—A wave of strikes, strike threats and general economic unrest swept France today making urgent and more difficult President Rene Coty's task of finding a new premier.

The political crisis was so deep, so far reaching that a growing feeling of alarm was reflected in the Paris press. Prices dipped on the stock market and the franc fell slightly Tuesday.

The government of Premier Maurice Bourges-Maunoury was down but not quite out as result of the loss of a vote of confidence Monday night. He was legally still in office, but with no actual power.

To President Coty fell the task of bringing some order out of the threatened chaos and the feeling grew he must find another French strongman, another Gen. Charles de Gaulle or another Pierre Mendez-France.

The labor unrest piled troubles on a government already bogged down in disagreement. France had no firm hand to quell the national discontent or even to represent the country at the forthcoming U.N. debate on Algeria.

Farmers throughout France were on strike against the government's agricultural price-pegging policy, still in effect despite Bourges - Maunoury's downfall. Sporadic industrial strikes broke out across the country.

Prince Philip's Nerves on Edge Because of Attacks on the Queen

(Third of five dispatches on Britain's royal prince.)

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UP) — Britain's Prince Philip has been losing weight lately and friends say it is partly due to aggravation over the attack on the Queen.

His nerves are obviously on edge. He has averaged two public engagements a day for five months and his commonwealth tour in late 1946 was one of the most strenuous ever undertaken by a member of the royal family.

Everyone hopes Philip will regain his good temper soon—before his visit this month to the United States and Canada. He has a light touch with public affairs that is most refreshing.

After seeing Jimmy Durante at a vaudeville show, he pointed to his own strong nose and cracked: "Schnozzle Montbatten, that's me."

"Do you know the Scilly Isles?" asked a man he once met. Know them?" said Philip. "My son owns them."

During this year's state visit to Denmark, he downed a bottle of beer as a chaser to champagne—with a sly glance at the Queen.

Philip has made a marvelous difference to the normally quiet Elizabeth.

Prefers Cricket

The only interest they do not share is horse racing. She loves it, goes to the races every time she can, has a fine stable. Philip is frankly bored. He prefers the cricket pitch or the polo field.

He is six feet of fine, all-around athlete with the build of a rangy, light-heavyweight. Add to this a lean jaw, a smile of flashing white teeth, blue eyes and blond hair and it is easy to see why he captivates women.

One girl pretended to swoon beside his automobile while he was on tour.

"Steady, girl, steady," he laughed.

He has the knack of keeping the Queen interested in the public duty of the moment and this is not always an easy feat on their often tedious schedule. He has been seen to nudge her into a smile. He often refers to her as "my wife" instead of "the Queen."

He was once introduced to a couple, Mr. and Dr. Robinson. The man explained that his wife was a doctor of philosophy. "She's much more important than me," he said. "Ah yes," replied Philip. "We have the same sort of trouble in our family."

The Queen has a family preference for fussy clothes. Philip is credited with persuading her to diet and wear clothes that emphasize the basically good figure thus revealed. His own clothes are casual, except his uniforms. He dismays his tailors by his habit of jamming his hands into suit pockets.

Voice Resonant

His speaking voice is a clear, resonant baritone. Even anti-royalists had to agree, after he introduced a BBC-TV program on the International Geophysical Year, that he is one of the most attractive television personalities in Britain.

Prince Philip

Philip has far more defenders than detractors and even some of those who oppose him at times only do so out of a real concern that his informality may damage the half - mystical aura of the throne. The Daily Express, for example, warned Philip about being too human.

"Once a royal person makes clear to all that he is just like anyone else—only better off—why should 50.000.000 citizens regard him as royal?" the newspaper asked.

This feeling on the part of the Queen's advisers was partly responsible for the brief tug-of-war over the education of the heir to the throne, nine-year-old Prince Charles. The Old Guard wanted him educated in private, as had been the immemorial custom.

Philip stubbornly demanded schooling with other children. He won and his son now goes to Cheam, Philip's own old school. It is the oldest and most exclusive preparatory school in the country, but it is a tradition-busting step toward liberalizing the education of the royal family.

Steel Scrap Prices Slump, Report Shows

NEW YORK (UP) — The unexpected slow fall pickup in steel demand is reflected in slumping prices of iron and steel scrap, Iron Age said today.

The bottom dropped out of the scrap market last week and the decline is expected to continue, the authoritative trade journal said.

The current price of scrap is off about 40 per cent from last December's all-time high of more than 65 a ton, according to a composite price index compiled by the metalworking weekly.

Iron Age attributed the price slide to the fact the mills are loaded with scrap and have little or no intention of buying unless the steel market shows more zip than it has in recent weeks

"There's still plenty of room for prices to drop before anyone starts looking for more scrap," Iron Age quoted one dealer as saying It also said one buyer commented that "we're beginning to think there's no bottom to this market"

Meanwhile, the weekly added, the "creeping improvement" in steel during the last several weeks has been a keen disappointment to the mills "The customer is still in the saddle and it looks as though he'll stay there for some time," it stated

Detroit is the culprit behind the slow upturn in steel demand, the weekly said. It pointed out that auto makers are playing their cards carefully until they see how their new models strike the public's fancy.

The only area where the buyer is not calling the tune is in wide-flange beams, heavy plate, and line pipe, the publication said But indications are that in 1958 he will have more to say about these items, too."

Fair Skies Over Most of Nation

By UNITED PRESS

Showers continued over the rain-drenched south Atlantic coast today, but most of the rest of the nation enjoyed relatively fair skies.

The only other area of precipitation Tuesday night and early today occurred in the Northwest where scattered showers fell in the northern and central Rockies and Washington and Oregon

Overnight lows ranged from the 40s in the Great Lakes and New England to the 80s in the desert Southwest

Forecasters said generally fair and mild weather will continue today over most of the nation with the exception of the south Atlantic coast and the Northwest

Heart Massager Is Developed by U. S.

WASHINGTON (UP)—Development of a simple, safe and reliable electronic instrument to revive the human heart was announced by government today.

Officials said the invention holds promise of eliminating the need for thoractomy—an emergency operation in which the surgeon opens a patient's chest and massages the heart with his hands in an effort to revive it

The Commerce Department said the "simple, compact safe and reliable" device was developed by the Air Force Aero Medical Laboratory So far, it has been used experimentally on animals.

The Commerce Department said the instrument is effective both in restoring heartbeats after a complete standstill or for strengthening the beating of a feeble heart

A department spokesman described the device as a relatively small piece of equipment which could be placed in the operating room in the event of a heart beat emergency

The machine, called a "pacemaker - defibrillator," has two wand-like rods with discs on the end which are held to the chest The rods, called hand-held electrodes, send an electrical charge to the heart

The machine combines two functions. Its "pacemaker" feature revives a heart brought to a standstill. The defibrillator effect is designed to correct heart beats that are out of synchronization Its primary function, according to the spokesman, is to avoid opening the chest surgically and massaging the heart manually

He explained that the "pacemaker" machine has been available commercially since 1953, but this is the first machine that also combines the heart-synchronization effect

Man has experimented with electric charges and massage of the heart since 1775 but the first development of the pacemaker principle did not come until 1932

Want Hospital Funds

HARRISBURG (UP)—The state Welfare Department has sent a ranking staff member to Atlantic City to confer with federal officials to expedite approval of hospital projects in Pennsylvania involving $447,332 in Hill-Burton funds.

Ira J. Mills, director of the department's Bureau of General Hospitals, planned to meet with federal ehalth officers during a week-long convention of U.S. Public Health Service workers at the New Jersey resort. The convention ends Friday.

A department spokesman said Mills hoped to win approval of proposed plans to construct psychiatric clinics in five general hospitals. The hospitals and the federal grants involved include Elk County Hospital, $83,333; Allentown, $107,000; Hamot Hospital, Erie County, $107,000; Harrisburg Polyclinic, $76,666, and Harrisburg General, $73,333.

The state department approved the projects and recommended their construction to the federal health officials. If the federal government passes on the projects, the hospitals will be reimbursed in the amounts approved beginning when the clinics are one-quarter completed.

Pennsylvania was allocated $5,959,732 in federal Hill Burton funds for use this year. About one-half the money was earmarked for general hospital construction. A similar grant in 1956 was used entirely for mental hospital work.

About nine per cent of juvenile delinquents are mentally deficient.

New 'Girard' Case Building in Korea

By CHARLES R. SMITH

SEOUL (UP) — Korean government and U. S. military authorities worked behind the scenes today to prevent what could easily blow up into a new "Girard case" here in Korea.

The storm has been building up for months.

But the thunder became intense only recently when two teenage Korean girls were shot by U.S. guards at the Kunsan Air Base some 100 miles south of here. Both the Korean government and top-level U.S. military authorities are carrying out intensive investigations into the incident.

The Korean press has used the incident to splash its sharpest criticism of U.S. troops in some time. And one top Korean official accused the U.S. troops of harboring "racial contempt" for the Koreans—this coming at a time when the Little Rock integration riots were top-head news here.

A series of so-called "minor" incidents at the air base have added fuel to the fire, incidents involving attacks by Air Force sentry dogs on Korean villages. Reports indicate none of the incidents resulted in serious injury and probably would not be significant if taken alone. However, tied in with the shooting of the two girls and several previous incidents in other areas, they become increasingly important.

The basic reason for the press criticism is the steadily growing pressure for a status of forces agreement between the U.S. and Korea.

The incident that kicked off the controversy and started the first sharp criticism occurred last May, but the case involving the two girls occurred Sunday, Sept. 15. The girls, Kim Yong Yi, 18, and Kang Kum Sun, 17, were struck by bullets fired by two Air Force guards on duty at a bomb dump area at the base.

Military spokesmen said the girls were part of a group of some seven or eight persons in the area who fled when the guards attempted to apprehend them for questioning. When the girls failed to halt, the guards fired into the group, one of the bullets striking Miss Kim in the temple and another striking Miss Yang in the arm. Miss Kim has been listed in "critical" condition.

Korean press reports said the girls were cutting weeds outside the fenced-in area when the guards yelled at them causing them to flee.

Say Relations Good

Both Korean and U.S. authorities say relations between the villagers and troops at Kunsan and in every other area are good.

They point out that the Korean people are now beginning to assert their independence for the first time since the end of hostilities.

The enmity between Japan and Korea is one of the basic reasons for a status of forces agreement, according to one highly informed source.

The source said the U.S. has a status of forces agreement with Japan, while Korea, as well as Formosa and The Philippines, are treated as "country cousins."

Official feeling among both American and Korean officials is that the situation as it now stands is not likely to get out of hand and develop into a critical situation.

But, they say, any new incident in the near future could seriously impair the present good ROK-U.S. relations.

Angry Western Delegates Map Strategy Today

VIENNA (UP)—Angry Western delegates mapped strategy today to prevent any Soviet attempt to convert the first world wide atoms-for-peace organization into another sounding board for Communist propaganda.

The International Atomic Energy Agency scheduled its first working session this morning in Vienna's Concert House. The first order of business was the election of a conference chairman and 10 members of the 28-country board of governors.

Western delgates made no attempt to hide their indignation at the propaganda - larded message from Soviet President Klimenti Voroshilov read at the opening meeting Tuesday.

Voroshilov reiterated the Kremlin's demand for a "no - strings" ban on nuclear bombs. The West insists that such a ban must be accompanied by proper safeguards.

Some delegates saw Voroshilov's message as a warning that the Russians may seek to hamstring the new organization by using it for propaganda tirades against the West.

Robber Crowded Out

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UP)—Benton L. Yerkey told police Tuesday why he robbed the Dale Branch of the Appleton State Bank. Another bank he was planning to rob in Fremont, Wis. was too crowded.

Russia Has Weapons But Very Few Diapers

By WHITMAN BASSOW

MOSCOW (UP) — Russia may have the intercontinental missile, the only jet airliners in service, the world's great ballerina.

But there was a crisis not long ago when my wife and I were convinced it does not have something far more important to millions of its younger citizens — diapers.

We started on the trail one afternoon the day after we returned from a vacation in New York where our daughter, Fern Elizabeth, now aged 14 weeks, was born.

A crowd gathered at the door to Moscow's biggest children's store at the spectacle of a non-Communist blue and green plaid baby carriage. Fern was inside, asleep. We pushed ahead manfully, ignoring the amused and questioning smiles. Nothing would distract us from our goal: One dozen diapers urgently needed.

Everything But...

We wheeled across the marble floor to the section marked "for the littlest ones" and edged to the counter. There were such useful items as flannel blankets, flannel shirts and nighties, white linen buntings, cute linen hats embroidered with red and blue flowers. But no diapers.

We went to the next counter and found bottle nipples, baby soap, thermometers and cream for rash. But no diapers. The salesgirl said to try the third floor.

On the third floor we went to the linen and blanket department. No diapers. At the information desk we asked if diapers were sold anywhere in the store. The girl said "no" and we returned to our hotel.

In desperation we phoned Tania, a Russian friend and mother of a year-old girl. Tania said she would help us. Three days later she called to say she had tried all the stores, but they seemed to be out of diapers.

Next day she entered our room bearing a small paper bundle which she opened with an air of triumph. Inside was a 20-foot length of gauze, half a dozen linen sheets about 24 inches wide and six soft flannel wrapping blankets.

"Where are the diapers?" I asked.

"Be patient," said Tania, "and you shall see."

Tania folded the gauze into a double thickness and cut strips about two feet wide. These she folded into rectangles about six by 24 inches.

"Now where is the baby?" she asked.

"Asleep," said my wife, "and I don't want to awaken her."

Tania looked around the room and zeroed in our stubby white dog, Schnutzl.

"He will do," she said.

She twined the "diaper" around Schnutzl's legs. It was fastened by tucking the ends of the gauze together. No pins. Then she folded the white linen sheet around the dog right up to his ears, swaddling him like a mummy. Over the linen, she wrapped a flannel blanket.

44 Koreans Face Murder Charges

PUSAN, KOREA, (UP)—Forty-four Korean fishermen, indicted for murder in the fatal beating of 22 lepers in August, probably will go on trial late in October, police indicated today.

The 44 allegedly were part of an angry stick-wielding mob of villagers on Pitori-Do Island, about 50 miles west of Pusan, who attacked the lepers in an attempt to drive them away from the island.

The lepers had come from Samchon-Po town across the channel to build houses on the island. The fishermen said they did not want the lepers to live on the island because it would make people afraid to buy thir seafood products for fear of contamination.

There Is Danger for People Who Faint While Propped Up

By DELOS SMITH

NEW YORK (UP) — There is potential danger for people who faint in a dentist's chair while taking gas or while propped up in a hospital bed — and dentists and nurses must be on their toes to detect a faint the instant it happens.

This was the recommendation of a carefully detailed scientific investigation. When people faint while standing or while sitting normally they fall or they slump and slide — and that is good because it gets them quickly into a horizontal position.

But when they faint in the dentist chair at the instant they are about to go under the dental gas, it is all too easy for the dentist to think it is only the gas taking effect. And so they are kept upright in the chair and the dentist proceeds.

And if they are propped up in a hospital bed soon after major surgery and then faint, it is fairly easy for a nurse to think they have fallen asleep — and they remain upright.

What happens inside people when they faint is well known. Blood pressure falls abruptly. Blood circulation in the brain approaches standstill. Brain cells are threatened by a shortage of oxygen and the result could be very bad or even fatal — but if the person has fallen flat, circulation is restored quickly and consciousness returns.

Dr. J. G. Bourne, an anesthetist who did the investigating, found that while it was rather unusual it was not uncommon for dental patients not to recover immediately from gas but to remain unconscious or stuperous for long periods. They had fainted at the very onset.

"Many patients dread anesthesia more than the operation itself, which may explain the faints during induction of anesthesia," he reported. "But fainting may also be caused by breathing mixtures low in oxygen."

The principal component of dental gas is nitrous oxide. Is is low on potency for anethestic purposes. With a mask on his face, the patient must breathe whatever mixture is put into the mask, and quite often the oxygen in the mixture is low to make the nitrous oxide more potent.

The really perfect answer, Bourne said. "Must await the development of safe and satisfactory methods of giving anesthesia for dental extraction without restriction of oxygen and with the patient lying down. Meanwhile, many cases could be prevented if dentists and dental anesthetists were warned of the dangers of the upright position and of the significance of pallor. It is of paramount importance in such cases to lay the patient flat without delay."

He criticized "a principle of surgical nursing" which calls for propping up patients soon after some types of operations. "Shock" occasionally follows and, he said, "it seems probable that this form of 'shock' is only a common fainting-attack. The danger is especially great, since there must inevitably be considerable periods during the night when any given patient is not under direct observation. Moreover, in a dimly lighted ward, fainting may be mistaken for normal sleep."

His challenge to dentists and surgeons both was: "Is the upright position necessary?" He is an English scientist but his investigation was of American as well as English experiences. He reported to the technical journal, "The Lancet."

Medical Use Of Radiation To Be Reduced

WASHINGTON (UP)—A scientist said today medical and dental use of radiation must be "considerably reduce" to permit safe peacetime development of atomic energy.

Dr. Bentley Glass of Johns Hopkins University said this can be done "without impairing medical and dental efficiency."

Glass spoke at a panel discusson on radiation hazards at the 58th annual meeting of the American Roentgen Ray Society.

The National Academy of sciences has recommended in the interests of genetic health that exposure of an individual's reproductive organs through age 30 be limited to 10 roentgens above natural radiation from minerals and cosmic rays.

The average American, Glass said, is now getting a 30-year radiation dose from medical-dental examination and treatment of about 4.6 roentgens. This is nearly half the academy's recommended limit.

When atomic power comes of age in the next decade or two it will bring with it additional radiation exposure, he said.

So, Glass said, reduction of medical - dental radiation exposure "will be necessary if the development of atomic energy for power and other peaceful purposes is to proceed without serious danger of exceeding a safe limit."

HELD IN SLAYING — Thomas J. Moore, 16, yells at a photographer after he was arraigned in Adolescent Court, New York, in connection with the stabbing-strangulation death of Mrs. Dorothy West Blum, 56, former bit Broadway actress. The youth, who was on probation for attacking a policeman, was held without bail on a homicide charge.

Margaret Asked to Rose Bowl

LONDON (UP) — Princess Margaret may be marshal of the next Rose Bowl game at Pasadena, Calif., a London newspaper said today.

The Daily Mail said an invitation from the Rose Bowl committee was being considered at Buckingham Palace.

Columnist Paul Tanfeidl quoted "Americans in London" as saying they believed Margaret would accept and make the trip to the United States after Christmas. The Rose Bowl festival is held on January 1.

A spokesman at the palace said he knew nothing of any such invitation.

3 Memorials

In loving memory of our father, David H. Coughenour, who departed this life September 29, 1947 in his 89th year.

Gone dear father, gone forever
How we miss your smiling face,
Here you left us to remember
None on earth can take your place.
Some may think you are forgotten
Since on earth you dwell no more
But in memory you are with us
As you always were before.

Sadly missed by daughters: Vinia, Daisy Coughenour Smith and son, William Coughenour and Grandchildren.

In loving memory of our dear mother and grandmother, Mrs. Ruth E. Hutchison, who died four years ago, October 1, 1953.

I cannot say, I will not say
That she is dead, she is just away.
With a cheery smile, and a wave of the hand,
She has wondered into an unknown land,
And left us dreaming how very fair,
It needs must be, since she lingers there.
And you, oh, you, who the while dost yearn
For the old time step and the glad return,
Think of her faring as dear in the love of there;
As in the love of here;
Think of her still, as the same, I say
She is not dead, she is just away.

Sadly missed by daughter, Esther Barnett and grandson, Robert Allen.

'Idiot' Helpful Machine

By GLENN STACKHOUSE
United Press Staff Correspondent

CHINA LAKE, Calif. (UP) — A Navy carrier pilot in a F4D Skyhawk skimmed across the sagebrush of the Mojave Desert at 500 knots, pulled up into a half-loop and slung a practice bomb in the general direction of the moon.

The young jet jockey was flying through the "idiot machine" to learn how to send an H-bomb toward the enemy in a special way.

It is known as "loft bombing." It sends the bomb through a three mile arc like a long punt from the 10-yard line. By the time it explodes, the pilot is miles away.

Loft bombing and another maneuver known as "over-the-shoulder" bombing are the only means of safely delivering a nuclear weapon from low altitude. In the latter technique, a pilot flies over his target, then zooms up, flinging his bomb some 12,000 feet straight into the air. He then has about 40 seconds to put distance between himself and the target.

Electronic Sharpshooters

Until the invention of the "idiot machine," however, these techniques were hit-and-miss maneuvers. Today, after a four day course at this naval ordnance test station, it's a pretty poor pilot who can't "punt" his bomb three miles and deposit it in a target the size of a football stadium.

The "idiot machine" is a complex electronic system which measures the pilot's speed and draws out the exact profile of his pull-up with an ink line on graph paper. It was devised by three China Lake civilian scientist - engineers: Dr. Newtown E. Ward, head of aviation ordnance; Rod McClung, instrumentation expert, and Duane Mack, range engineer.

Two Main Components

Mack, whose crew operates the instruments from a control tower at the end of China Lake's "Charlie Range," explained that the machine consists of two main components.

"First is a "sky screen array," a series of photo - electric cells placed at 1,000 - yard intervals along a 14-mile approach path. These give the exact ground speed of the plane.

The second component is the profile tracker, a pair of powerful binoculars on a power - driven gun mount with which the operator can follow the maneuvering plane on its exact arc. This information is also transmitted to graph paper in the tower.

Once a pilot has practiced loft-bombing with the guidance and correction from the tower for four days, he is equipped to do it without the machine. With the exception of an automatic bomb release, the entire loft maneuver is strictly a matter of pilot skill.

Predicts Rise in Hospital Rates

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (UP) — Dr. Albert W. Snoke, New Haven, Conn., president of the American Hospital Association, Tuesday predicted a continuing rise in hospital costs as the reflection of the nationwide problem of inflation and spiraling wage scales.

Speaking at the association's 59th annual convention, Dr. Snoke said widespread medical and hospital insurance offer the only hope for paying the medical and hospital care of a vast majority of Americans.

He suggested the programs be so patterned that the subscriber does not need to be in a hospital bed in order to benefit from his policy.

Lillian G. Baird, Ann Arbor, Mich., was reelected president of the American Association of Nurse anesthetists, which is meeting here in conjunction with the AHA convention.

Appendix Attack Is Dangerous

By H. N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

AN appendicitis attack is a serious thing for anyone, but it is especially dangerous when the victim is an infant. The infant death rate from appendicitis is higher than that for adults.

Immediate diagnosis of an attack is essential because the course of an acute case of appendicitis in children is very rapid. While only a doctor can make a diagnosis, it's up to you parents to know when to call him.

Time is precious when that little tot of yours is ill....

As with adults, abdominal pain, localized tenderness and vomiting are the chief symptoms of appendicitis in children. But there are other things parents should watch for, too.

An infant with an abdominal pain probably will be irritable and restless. He will not sleep well.

If vomiting is severe, the youngster may also be constipated, although this is not always the case with appendicitis.

Following Infection

It's especially advisable to be alert for any of these symptoms following an acute infectious disease, a respiratory infection or gastronentertis.

Try to determine just when these symptoms appeared, especially if they are linked with such disturbances as fever, changes in the child's sleep pattern, refusal to eat and similar occurrences.

The temperature of the child his pulse rate and the white blood cell count doesn't help much in determining whether the illness is appendicitis. The only way to diagnose the situation is by physical examination of the baby.

Here, too, you parents can help the doctor. Probably the easiest and quickest way of conducting a preliminary examination is to permit the infant to lie on his mother's lap while still fully clothed.

After the physician determines whether there is any localized tenderness, he can make a more thorough examination.

Parade of Stars On 'Big Record'

Julie London, who is both an accomplished singer and actress, will blend her talents with those of hostess Patti Page and a galaxy of other top flight stars of the music world on CBS tonight from 8 - 9 on KDKA-TV.

Also joining Miss Page on the big television turntable will be Paul Whiteman, Les Paul and Mary Ford, current singing sensation Johnny Mathis, The Coasters, a quartet, English band leader Ron Goodwin and, as a special guest, Fernando Lamos.

Gisele MacKenzie Has Solution for Privacy

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UP) — Gisele MacKenzie has found a solution for video stars who tire of the public limelight. "Go to Europe." she advises, "people over there don't know TV stars from Adam."

Just back from 2½ weeks in Rome, Venice, London and Paris, the willowy songbird found all the privacy she wanted.

"Too much, in fact," she laughed. "I got lonesome over there.

"In most countries television still is a novelty. American programs are rare except in England. The only people who stop and stare are American tourists—the same characters who stare at you over here."

After four years on "Your Hit Parade," Gisele has moved to her own half-hour variety show.

Her backer: Jack Benny.

Benny Gives Advice

"Mr. Benny advised me a year ago it was time to strike out on my own," she said. "He said either you move ahead or slide back in television. And if you're standing still you're losing ground.

"So now Mr. Benny's company, J-M Productions, is producing my show on NBC. He will do all the script editing himself.

"Mr. Benny will be a guest star on the program a little later on in the season, too. His participation has given me a lot of confidence in myself and the show."

Benny has played a large role in Gisele's career. He spotted her first singing with Bob Crosby in a Las Vegas hotel. When he learned that "Hit Parade" was seeking a girl vocalist the comedian set up one of the most expensive auditions in show business history.

Gisele MacKenzie

Gisele Gets Job

Gisele appeared on his TV show. And Jack saw to it that the "Hit Parade" sponsors were watching. Gisele got the job.

"I'm thrilled, excited and scared about doing my own show," the dark - haired Gisele said. "The scripts call for me to sing, dance and take part in comedy routines. I'll play the violin and piano, too.

"I hope we can work in another violin duet with Mr. Benny." she concluded. "Our first one on his show three years ago is what launched the idea of my having a show of my own some day. And now it's come true."

The peach has long been cultivated in China. It was written about some 2,000 years before its introduction to the Roman world.

Baseball Lexicon Explained

By WILLIAM EWALD

NEW YORK (UP)—Well, here we go again. The summer is past, the time of the singing of birds is come and the voice of the World Series announcer is heard in our land.

Last year, almost 6 million viewers ignited their TV bulbs to glim some part of the tug between the New York Yankees and Brooklyn Dodgers. This year, if the Series goes seven games, NBC expects 75 million viewers to succumb to the charms of the Yanks and Milwaukee Braves.

Unfortunately, many of the watchers will be peeking at a ball game for the first time and may wind up more baffled than entertained. The terminology of ball announcers is frequently recondite. So, for the benefit of initiates, we present the following lexicon of terms you're apt to hear on your TV set:

One foot from the bucket — Yogi stepped into the water pail again.

Free swinging outfit—The Count Basie band.

The autumnal classic— October issue of "Playboy."

Crafty lefthander —He always gets the best seat in the hotel lobby.

That ball took a tricky hop—The shortstop didn't get to bed until three this morning.

One of the greatest catches I've ever seen—A routine catch.

Positively one of the greatest catches I've ever seen—Positivly a routine catch.

A catch that made baseball history—He almost dropped it.

Some good - natured heckling from the fans—The plate umpire was just struck by a seat cushion.

The old ball game is never over until the last man is out—and if you stick with us, we'll be sure of an audience for our last two commercials.

The pitcher is throwing aspirin tablets—The catcher needs 'em. He has a handover.

A tight pitcher's battle —Both of the pitchers look tight, too.

Promising young bonus player—He'll get to play if everybody else gets Asian flu.

Good long ball hitter—He could hit the ball, if they'd make it about three feet longer.

Rifle arm—It's shot.

Conference out there on the mound— The second baseman is pointing out a pip of a blonde to the pitcher.

Good baserunner—He can't hit. He can't field. But he comes cheap.

A whale of a ballplayer — He weighs 250 pounds and it's all blubber.

The fans are applauding every play out there—It's freezing here in Milwaukee and they're trying to ward off frostbite.

Lots of fire in that team—It's so cold somebody's burning the bench in the dugout.

The Yankee manager is doing a slow burn—Gad, somebody just set fire to Casey Stengel.

Dentist's Mistake Almost Was Costly

SAN FRANCISCO (UP) — Police rushed to the dental office of Dr. Gerald T. O'Connor Monday to quiet a patient who threatened to kill the dentist, berated him an hour, and told all his patients to go home.

The patient, Nicholas Aorlowsky, told police he had a good reason for his actions —. he claimed O'Connor pulled the wrong tooth.
